Lilienthal Quits AEC; No Hint on Successor

Wants to Engage In Public Affairs Without Restraints Of Office, He Says

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

David E. Lilienthal yesterday looked back at a 20 years' career as a Government official and decided enough was enough.

He resigned as chairman and member of the Atomic Energy Commission, effective next December 31, and said that was the end of his work as a public servant.

He asked the White House for leave to return to private life, where he could "engage in public discussion and public affairs with greater latitude than is either feasible or suitable" for a man in public office.

Truman's Glowing Praise

Mr. Truman granted him that right, in a letter of acceptance which was as glowing in praise—and as regretful at a loss—as any that the President has ever written.

Aside from the reference in his resignation letter that he proposed to "continue to be active in public affairs" and wanted a chance to do it in a less inhibited way, Lilienthal did not expand on his reasons for leaving.

Nor did he mention, in his letter or otherwise, what work he would undertake. His closest colleagues last night confirmed his statements to various reporters that he simply does not know.

He is said not to fancy himself as a lawyer, although once he commanded high attorney fees. It seems clear his talents are such that he will not be obligated to use the "resignation gift" his wife gave him—a tin cup and pencils.

There was immediate speculation yesterday of the liveliest sort as to the "real" reason for his resignation. As far as this reporter can determine, these are the facts:

Long Considered Action

Lilienthal has wanted to resign for some time. He has said he would not go through a third ordeal by Congress when a nomination for his reappointment to the AEC would have come up next spring. The first ordeal was a harrowing two-month battle in the spring of 1946 on his original nomination. The second was last summer's investigation of charges of "incredible mismanagement" at the hands of Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa).

The appropriate time to resign seemed to him to be now, with Congress not in session. To have waited until next spring would

U. N. Chinese Brand Russia As 'Criminal'

Fiery Words Swapped After Vishinsky Withdraws Recognition

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Russia called the Chinese Nationalist delegation a bunch of pygmies today and said Moscow no longer recognizes their right to represent China in the United Nations.

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Prime Minister Stalin's top diplomat, told the General Assembly the Nationalists here couldn't represent China even if they wanted to because—he said—350 million of China's 450 million people have recognized the Communist regime headed by Mao Tze-tung in Peiping.

Chieh-hou Kan, personal adviser to Li Tsung-jen, acting president of Nationalist China, angrily replied that Russia had perpetrated serious international crimes in China.

He told the Soviet Foreign Minister that God and the conscience of the world will indict Russia even if the Nationalists lose their seat at the U. N.

The heated exchange occurred as an offshoot of debate on proposals for banning atom bombs and for control of atomic energy by international agreement.

Vishinsky touched off the fireworks when, in the middle of a speech on atomic energy, he shouted that Russia does not regard "the Kuomintang delegation" as the legal Chinese spokesman.

This was interpreted as indicating the Soviet Union will play a leading role in the impending battle to get the Chinese Communists a big power seat in the U. N.

Grenade Factory Reported Seized In Bogota Raid

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Conservative government pressing for a presidential election Sunday despite Liberal opposition, today announced discovery of a grenade factory in Bogota and said men working there were turned over to army authorities.

The government decreed that persons arrested for crimes under the state of siege could not be released on bond, but only after acquittal by a military court. The decree said a statement by one "credible witness" is sufficient reason for arrest.

The Bogota raid was the sixth of that type announced recently. The government said 200 grenades were seized. Conservatives charge their opponents planned to use the explosives in terrorism on the eve of the election, in which Conservative Laureano Gomez is the only candidate.

Navy May Lease Giant Transport Planes to Airlines

NYHT News Service

Navy officials disclosed yesterday that they plan to lease their two 180-passenger Lockheed Constitution aerial troop transports for commercial air line use unless the Air Force wants the giant craft for its military air transport service. It had been announced earlier that the planes, which dwarf anything in the world thus far employed in regular air transportation, would be put in "mothball" storage because the Navy lacked funds to operate them under its reduced budget.

A spokesman for Pan American Airways said that company had submitted a bid for use of the two planes. At least two other air lines and one or more charter service operators were "understood" to have made similar proposals. The sealed bids will be opened "in the near future."

Amtorg Fine Of $10,000 Suspended

District Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday fined Amtorg, the Soviet trading corporation, $10,000 for failing to register as a foreign agent—then suspended imposition of the fine.

At the Government's request, the jurist dropped identical charges against six officials of the corporation.

The court earlier had allowed a plea of nolo contendre by the corporation.

Statements were read to the court by Attorney Martin Popper representing the defendants; and United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Popper rapidly read his defense statement in which he asserted that Amtorg, since its incorporation in 1924 in New York, had as its sole purpose the fostering of trade and commerce between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Fay, who said he was speaking with the approval of the State Department and the Justice Department, told the court that the corporation and the officials, since their indictment October 21, had registered as foreign agents.

The prosecutor declared the State Department "believes that the interests of the United States in the conduct of its foreign affairs will best be served by the dismissal of the indictment against the individual defendants."

Fay also pointed out that all the individuals had entered the United States "on diplomatic or official passports," and said "while the Government does not recognize a claim of diplomatic immunity as to any of these individuals, it is recognized that they are officials of the Soviet government. . . ."

The six officials are Aleksei Vasilievich Zakharov, president; Dmitri Ivanovich Bagrov, former vice president, now reported to be in Russia; Vassili Petrovich Rebrov, vice president; Serguei Andreevich Shevchenko, treasurer; Aleksander Aleksasdrovich Itschenko, secretary, and Gennadi Nikolaevich Ogloblin, former assistant treasurer.

Dali Lauds Pope's 'Comprehension' of Madonna Painting

Rome, Nov. 23 (NYHT).—Salvador Dali, the painter, visited Pope Pius today to show him his new surrealist painting of the Immaculate Conception.

Dali said later the pontiff showed "great comprehension." Dali has decided that his work has been "frivolous" until now and that probably "for many years to come" he will devote himself to surrealist religious art.

His "Immaculate Conception" is a Rafaelesque Madonna and Child. The body outlines are normal, but a rectangular open space punctures almost the entire central part of the Virgin's body, from chest to waist. Inside the open space is a figure of the Infant Jesus, floating in the empty air. A rectangular open space pierces the chest of the Child as well.

Dali said the open spaces were intended to signify the absence of materialism and thus the presence of spirituality. Emphasizing the same idea, the Madonna sits on a chair suspended in mid-air. Over her head rises a stone arc, composed of stones floating separately in the air.

U. S. Willing to Receive Trade Agents of Japan

The United States is planning to let Japan establish trade representatives in this country within the next month or two.

The United States has proposed to the Far Eastern commission, 11-nation governing body for Japan, that it declare this to be the policy of all commission nations. Those familiar with the commission said, however, there appears to be little likelihood that body will approve the proposal soon.

Ward Freed, Ordered Out Of Red China

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Consul General Angus Ward and four of his consulate staff have been set free from a Communist jail in Mukden and have been ordered out of China.

A Communist "people's court" in Mukden found Ward and his aides guilty, imposed a six months' sentence on him, and then "commuted" the sentence to deportation.

The anxiously awaited news reached the State Department early yesterday morning. The department promptly ordered Ward to leave China "forthwith" with his entire consulate staff of 11 Americans.

The problem now is to get them out. Officials here assumed yesterday that as the Communists had ordered Ward deported they would also furnish the transportation.

But there was no assurance on this point. Only five of the Americans in the consulate appeared covered by the deportation order, and it was not clear whether the Communists would let the whole group go.

Soule Still Is Detained

Brig. Gen. Robert B. Soule, the American military attache in Communist-held Nanking, has been waiting since early October to get an exit visa which would let him come home. The State Department said yesterday there had been "no change" in the long detention of Soule, although three American officials in Shanghai have left after awaiting Communist permission for more than a month.

So it is too early to say that the Ward story has had a happy ending. Officials expect him to go to Shanghai on his way home, but are not sure how long he will have to wait in Mukden. No American transportation from Mukden is available, since no American planes have landed or left there since the Communists seized the city.

At any rate, the release of Ward brought vast relief to official Washington, which had been baffled and angered for weeks by its inability to do anything for him.

Ward himself told the first news of his release. He telephoned to Consul General Oliver E. Clubb in Shanghai to report that he was back in his own home, and that he and his four fellow-prisoners were "up and about" after their month in jail.

Sentenced to Six Months

A State Department statement, based on a message from Clubb in Shanghai, also said:

"The individual sentences imposed by the Mukden Communists were: Ward, six months' imprisonment, one year parole; Ralph C. Rehberg and Alfred Kristan, four months' imprisonment, one year parole; Shiro Tatsumi and Frank Cicognia, three months' imprisonment, one year parole. All sentences were commuted to deportation.

"Mr. Ward also reported that in addition to being charged with the assault of a Chinese worker, he was charged with certain financial obligations, including compen-

Johnson Sees Pact Defense Bars Cleared

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary Johnson, after conferring with Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, said yesterday that he believed the Atlantic Pact powers at their forthcoming Paris meeting would agree on a detailed defense plan.

Such an agreement would open the way for the United States to begin shipping some 900 million dollars in arms aid to the pact nations. Johnson announced that he and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would fly to Paris immediately after the Army-Navy game next Saturday.

Johnson told reporters after his meeting with Montgomery:

"It's expected that things will be in such shape that an integrated plan will be adopted which Secretary Acheson and I can certify to the President."

The Atlantic Pact military committee, of which Bradley is a member, meets in Paris November 29. The defense committee meets there December 1.

Montgomery spent the day yesterday conferring with Johnson, Bradley and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army.

Only once did the sharp-witted hero of El Alamein have an opportunity to engage in the verbal sparring with newsmen at which he has become so adept. Waylaid at the Pentagon by an assembly of photographers, talk turned to Saturday's big service game, which Montgomery will see. After Bradley had given Herb White of the Associated Press odds of two to one on Army for a $5 bet, Montgomery offered to bet also on Army. But he wanted odds.

George Tames of the New York Times finally took him on.

Meanwhile, Field Marshal Sir William J. Slim, Montgomery's successor as chief of the British Imperial General Staff, arrived at Montreal for a two-day visit in Canada. He will then fly to Philadelphia for the game and will remain in the United States until December 4, during which time he will inspect military installations and lecture at the National War College.

Rest Your Nerves, Moscow Radio Advises Wiley

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Moscow radio gave this advice tonight to United States Senator Wiley (R., Wis.): Nobody's going to drop a bomb on you, just go away and rest your nerves.

A commentator took note of Wiley's recent proposals for legislating by television and administering the Nation's affairs from a mobile capital mounted on a railroad train.

"Evidently Wiley thinks he could conduct his official duties more peacefully lying on an upper berth of a sleeping car with an eiderdown to inform the world of his unusual discoveries.

"Any person with a normal amount of common sense could reassure Senator Wiley that nobody is thinking of dropping atom bombs on his heated head."

Gear Taxes To Budget, CED Urges

Set tax rates and Federal expenditures at a level to balance the budget and provide a surplus when economic activity is high. Then don't tinker with either of them during minor economic fluctuations.

This was the burden of advice given to a congressional study group yesterday by the Committee for Economic Development, the Nation's most distinguished group of progressive businessmen.

Furthermore, said the CED, don't insist on a balanced Federal budget every year. As long as changes in business activity are minor, let a surplus of tax receipts in good times serve to retire the Federal debt. In less good times, let an excess of Government spending over receipts serve as an economic stimulus.

In a serious depression, go ahead and cut taxes and increase public spending, continued the CED advice. In a serious inflationary situation, raise taxes and cut Federal outlays.

But don't try to anticipate depressions or inflationary periods, the CED told Congress. Tax and budget policies based on guesses of what is coming are liable to be disappointing. The fine art of economic forecasting isn't good enough. Wait until the situation is clear; tax rates can then be changed swiftly enough.

CIO Witness Has Similar View

The CED position—a world removed, it appeared, from the traditional business view of the 1930's, when a balanced budget each year was considered the ideal, and deficit spending was the businessman's anathema—was laid out before a subgroup of the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. The subcommittee is conducting hearings on monetary, credit and fiscal policies.

A commentary on the distance which the business point of view in Federal financial matters has moved, is the fact that a later witness before the subcommittee yes

Lewis Calls Policy Group; Extension Of Truce Possible

By the United Press

John L. Lewis has summoned his top union policy committee to a new meeting Monday—possibly to extend the soft coal strike deadline beyond December 1, informed sources said last night.

It was understood the 200-man policy committee will meet in New York. The last time the committee met was November 8 when it voted to call off the soft coal strike until midnight November 30.

Lewis has told associates that he would extend the December 1 strike deadline if he got some assurances from coal operators that a new coal contract might be negotiated in the near future.

Polish Officer Freed by French, News Agency Says

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP).—French police released a Polish Army lieutenant today after holding him for 13 hours, the Polish News Agency said. It was believed the arrest was connected with the detention in Warsaw Friday of Andre Simon Robineau, a French diplomat charged by the Poles with espionage.

The Polish Agency said the lieutenant was arrested at 2 p. m. yesterday and held for 13 hours. He was identified as Lieutenant Myszkowski, an aide to the Polish military attache.

The agency said the arrest violated diplomatic immunity. The authorities had placed no charge against the lieutenant.

Maryland U. Bid for FAO Strikes Snag

Issue of Segregation Is Raised; Rejection Urged by NAACP

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Commission III of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization spent half a day yesterday discussing race segregation on the University of Maryland campus.

The question arose while President C. H. Byrd of the university was presenting Maryland's bid for the site of permanent FAO headquarters. George B. Stevenson, delegate of Liberia, interrupted to ask about "certain practices" on the campus and in the State.

Dr. B. R. Sen of India, presiding, explained to the surprised Byrd that the "practices" related to discrimination against colored races at the university. Byrd explained that if FAO should move to the Maryland campus there would be no discrimination against any of its officials or employes.

NAACP Telegram

Shortly after Byrd's speech, Chinese Delegate Chen Chih-mai, counselor of the Chinese Embassy, read a telegram from the Washington office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The message, signed by Roy Wilkins, assistant secretary, stated:

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People urges your delegation to the FAO to vote against accepting the University of Maryland as a location

Floberg Is Named As Navy Assistant Secretary for Air

John F. Floberg, Chicago lawyer and wartime Navy gunnery officer, yesterday was named Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

President Truman gave Floberg a recess appointment, which is subject to confirmation by the Senate when Congress reconvenes.

Floberg

Floberg, 34, succeeds to the vacancy created when Dan A. Kimball was elevated to Undersecretary of the Navy.

The Defense Department issued a biography that said Floberg volunteered for the Navy a month before Pearl Harbor and went to sea in 1943 as executive officer of a submarine chaser, which he later commanded in the North African, Sicilian and Salerno operations.

Navy Secretary Matthews' office has said Floberg is a brother-in-law of Matthews' daughter-in-law.

Panel Sent Home, Told To Return On Friday

No Possibility of Agreement, Judge Learns After 8 Hours' Deliberation

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The "Snags" Lewis gambling jury was recessed early this morning after eight hours of deliberation, "hopelessly deadlocked;" to return Friday morning and resume deliberation.

The jury of nine men and three women was sent home by Judge Matthew F. McGuire at 12:45 a. m.

Lewis and 13 other defendants are charged with operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate.

Before he recessed the jury, Judge McGuire asked foreman Condon M. Flynn, "is there any possibility of this jury reaching a verdict within a reasonable period of time?"

"I believe not your honor," Flynn replied.

"Do I infer from that that you are hopelessly deadlocked?" the judge asked.

Flynn paused, and replied, "Yes, sir."

At 11:15 p. m., Judge McGuire had called the jury into his court and asked the minority, "to give consideration to the opinion of the majority."

"A dissenting juror should consider whether his doubt is a real one, when it makes no impression on others equally honest," the judge said.

The jurors were then told to retire, and deliberated until Judge McGuire recessed them over the Thanksgiving holiday.

Judge McGuire warned the jurors, "as emphatically as I possibly can," not to read any newspapers today.

The 14 defendants are charged with violating the District lottery laws and with conspiring to violate these laws. The lottery count could carry a maximum penalty of three years in jail plus a $1000 fine.

The maximum penalty for conspiracy is five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

The defendants were arrested in a raid March 25 in an air-conditioned, sound-proofed room of a bungalow of 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md. The raid was one of eight conducted that day in Maryland and Washington under the guidance of United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Lewis has been described by the Government as a "big-shot gambler" and "the brains" of the syndicate. The success or failure of Fay's crusade against gambling hangs in the balance of this trial.

On trial, besides Lewis, are John R. Mitchell, 3110 10th st. ne.; Fulton J. Mitchell, 517 10th st. ne.; George P. Scott, 1031 E st. se.; Fred Sutton, 1210 6th st. nw.; Lonnie Black, 637 L st. se.; Anis Wycke, 122 F st. nw.; Ralph Spotswood, 318 North Henry st., Alexandria, Va.; Edward L. Indictment Based On $150 Million 'Sweep' Tickets

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today indicted Frank V. Nolan, 32, of Philadelphia, on charges of using the mails to operate a lottery in which, Federal authorities contended, he distributed some 150 million dollars worth of Irish Sweepstakes tickets.

Walter A. Cay, jr., assistant United States attorney, said Nolan was "the top man" of a group which sold the lottery tickets at $2.50 each.

Nolan was accused of operating the lottery in 13 Eastern States

Gay asserted Nolan had "a huge force of distributors, agents and couriers" under his command. Gay said "scores" of these persons will be indicted later.

Second Night of Violence

Panama Police and Students Exchange Fire at University

Panama, Nov. 23 (AP).—A gun battle between students and national police flared tonight at National University and first reports said two policemen and two civilians were wounded.

It was the second successive night of violence in Panama, where two men lay claim to the presidency.

The university is situated at the boundary line of Panama and the Canal Zone, which is under United States jurisdiction. Some students escaped from the police fire by jumping out of windows and taking refuge in the Canal Zone.

Police claimed the students opened fire first. There was no word on casualties inside the university building, where possibly 50 students were lodged.

The police laid siege to the building and made no attempt to smash their way inside.

Police had succeeded earlier in breaking up a student mass meeting in the heart of Panama called in protest against "military dictatorship."

Amidst general unrest stemming from fear of renewed bloodshed and threat of a general strike, the police broke up crowds forming near Santa Ana Plaza in the heart of the city to attend a rally.

The police—Panama's only armed force—patrolled the city while Roberto Chiari, president for the past four days, held the presiden-

Campaign Advances

Chest Attains 79.9% of Goal; Gifts Pass $3 Million Mark

Community Chest campaigners yesterday cleared the three-million-dollar mark in their drive for 1950 funds.

New contributions of $222,595, plus $25,000 presented to the campaign by the 1949 Inaugural Committee, brought the total yesterday to $3,112,790, or 77.98 percent of the $3,991,719.

Frank J. Luchs, campaign chairman, told the general report luncheon that the balance, divided among the 10 soliciting units, "is well within our reach if every member in every group in every unit keeps faith with us, the community, by covering his or her assignment."

He also urged workers to "make those last calls and sell the Red Feather appeal—not permit generous minded individuals to mail in their checks."

"When you finish your own job and receive our thanks," Luchs said, "if you really want to help us forge a victory, report to your unit chairman and volunteer to visit a few more people."

Luchs said the Thanksgiving celebration this year "becomes the outward and visible sign of our inward spiritual faith that we are going to complete this mission for our city and its people."

Melvin J. Hildreth, chairman of the 1949 Inaugural Committee, who presented the $25,000 check to the chest campaign, said President Truman had suggested that

Truce Is Reported In Luzon Fighting

Manila, (Thursday) Nov. 24 (AP). A two-day truce was reported today to have halted fighting between government forces and rebels south of Manila. Press reports said 29 men were known to have been killed in the two-day battle.

The truce reportedly was arranged by Gov. Feliciano Leviste of Batangas Province where the fighting has raged in the mountains near Batangas City

In Manila, however, Brig. Gen. Alberto Ramos, chief of the constabulary, said no truce had been sanctioned by him. He said he had no report of any negotiations to halt the fighting.

But Manila newspaper correspondents in Batangas reported firing c ased last night. They said the known dead numbered 27 constabulary troopers and two rebels. They estimated many more dissidents had been killed and the bodies removed.

The Batangas governor belongs to the Nacionalista Party of Dr. Jose P. Laurel, who lost the November 8 presidential election to President Elpidio Quirino. Nacionalistas have charged the election was marked by fraud and intimidation by government police.

Quirino yesterday described the situation in Batangas as "very serious" and said it might be "an organized effort to upset the government."

Quirino also was confronted with the resignation of former President Sergio Osmena from the Philippine Council of State in protest to the administration's handling of the recent presidential elections.

Osmena, in his announcement of resignation at Cebu City, said that in his opinion the people of Cebu had been intimidated by bands of armed special police when they went to the polls November 8.

20 Czechs Go on Trial As U. S. Spies

Prague, Nov. 23 (AP).—Czechoslovakia Communist rulers started another spy trial today. Twenty Czechs were arraigned on charges of stealing Czechoslovak industrial secrets for the United States.

Accused of espionage for the United States Army's counter intelligence corps, all went on trial before the State Court in Prague's Pankrac political prison. Three are women.

The state declared it had cracked the ring by planting a Czech secret agent in the group when it was allegedly organized in the United States occupation zone of Germany.

This hearing started only five days after the same state court reported the smashing of two other espionage rings working for Western powers with the sentencing of 55 Czechs to prison terms.

These trials usually are held in secret. The sentences are made public only in isolated cases.

This one started as an open hearing, with relatives of the accused and some others present.

However, when court attendants observed Western reporters there, the presiding judge announced the hearings must continue in secret because "state security and military secrets are involved."

The state charged the spy ring was led by four Czechoslovaks who had fled to exile in Western Germany after the Communist assumption of power here in February, 1948.

Alleged Baby-Beater Unable to Post Bond

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 23. James Roscoe Welburn, 33, of this city, is being held in the Garrett County jail at Oakland on charges of assault with attempt to kill his 5-month-old son.

Walburn was held after a preliminary hearing before Trial Magistrate H. A. Loraditch in Oakland. Bond was set at $1,000. Unable to post it, he was returned to jail for action of the March grand jury there.

Catholics Are Curbed in Sale Of Red Papers

Vatican City, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Holy Office ruled today Roman Catholic sacraments must be refused Catholic news vendors who sell Communist newspapers knowingly and freely, and those forced to sell them should limit sales "as far as possible."

The ruling was aimed at such organs as the Daily Worker in the United States, the Rome daily L'Unita in Italy and other publications supporting the Communist line.

It explained a section of the decree by Pope Pius XII in July excommunicating militant Communists and denying the sacraments to Catholics who "publish, read or disseminate books, newspapers or leaflets in support of Communist doctrine."

The sacraments are baptism, confirmation, Holy Eucharist, penance, extreme unction, orders and matrimony.

The Holy Office, one of the 11 congregations of the church, is charged with combatting false doctrines to guard Catholics from the danger of deviation from the faith.

The Holy Office said union distributing organizations in some cities insist vendors peddle Communist newspapers or receive no papers at all, but the situation does not apply in other cities.

It was impossible to measure immediately the effect of the ruling on distribution of Communist publications in Italy, 99 percent of whose people are Catholics. Virtually all newsstands in Rome have displayed L'Unita regularly. The Communist Party has campaigned to push sales.

Argentine Deputies Move In On 4 Opposition Newspapers

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 23 (AP).—A two-man Congressional committee seized control of the business offices of the three remaining independent newspapers and the Communist organ La Hora in Buenos Aires today.

Auditors were set to work at La Nacion and La Prensa, both widely known dailies, La Hora, and the tabloid Clarin, whose editor, Dr. Roberto Noble, recently toured the United States as a guest of the United States State Department.

The committeemen said they were seeking to learn whether money was paid the newspapers by a coalition of parties which unsuccessfully opposed the election of Juan D. Peron to the presidency in 1946. Peronistas control both houses of the Argentine congress.

The two congressmen were accompained by about a dozen policemen and the same number of newspaper photographers. They formally took control of all administrative operations.

Parents kept their children home from school.

The Panama Radio, silent most of the day, was permitted to resume broadcasting this afternoon but was forbidden to broadcast news.

Police gunfire last night smashed a march of thousands on the presidential palace. A child was killed and 11 persons wounded by gunfire and rioting.

Chanis published an appeal for support in the afternoon newspaper Panama America. It referred to the "grave emergency" now existing and asked the people to "support without violence my stand."

Meanwhile Chanis, 58-year-old physician, moved from a friend's house where he had been staying to an undisclosed location. There were reports he had taken asylum in a foreign embassy. Police surrounded his home, where his wife remains.

Chinese Evacuation Of Chungking Set

Chungking, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Chinese government today streamlined itself and prepared to abandon Chungking and follow its armies as Red troops surged to within 70 miles of the city.

Just when the signal to quit Chungking would be given seemed to be up to the oncoming Communists. If they kept thrusting from the northeast, east and south the hour may come soon.

The Defense Ministry admitted the Reds had laid siege to Wulung, only 70 miles to the east. This put them 25 miles nearer Chungking than they were 24 hours earlier.

The ministry said other Red troops moving up the Yangtze Valley were near Chunghsein, 140 miles northeast of Chungking.

Private reports said the Communists from the south already had taken Tsunyi. This city is 130 miles south of Chungking. Between it and Chungking the road is good and not very mountainous.

Premier Yen Hsi-shan's announcement that a small mobile cabinet was being set up was the first clear indication that the government was preparing to abandon Chungking. The capital will be wherever this cabinet is functioning.

Each ministry in the mobile cabinet will have no more than 100 employes. Yen said offices would be established at an undisclosed place in the rear to keep the archives and handle routine business.

It is expected this place will be Taipeh, capital of the Nationalist island fortress of Formosa, off the southeast coast.

It was estimated Yen's order will throw 10,000 government employes out of jobs. He said they could quit or accept defense work in rear areas. They were promised severance pay if they quit.

Boy Survivor Of Plane Crash Has Pilot Aims

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Twelve-year-old Isaac Allam, sole survivor of 35 persons aboard a plane which crashed on a flight from Africa with Jewish refugee children, said today that he wants to be an airplane pilot.

Alone of the 28 children, Isaac had fastened his safety belt, and to that he owes his life. He had been playing with it when he decided to fasten it. As the plane touched the treetops, he instinctively tightened it. Isaac's face hit the seat in front of him. His nose was bruised and an eye was blackened.

On his way to the hospital yesterday, Isaac was startled and trembled when he heard the purr of an automobile heater which sounded like the motor of a distant plane. But today he was asked: "What do you want to be when you grow up?"

"I want to be a pilot," said Isaac eagerly.

Isaac said he had no brothers or sisters aboard the plane.

It was announced yesterday that two of Isaac's brothers and a sister died in the crash. A check with Tunis, whence the plane took off with North African refugee children, confirmed that three other children named Allam were aboard. But, it was said, Allam is a common name in the area and they were not relatives of Isaac. Isaac's own name had been given at first as "Allal."

Britain Warns U. S. To Quit Aiding Minority Moves

Lake Success, Nov. 23 (AP).—Britain warned the United States in effect today to quit supporting moves to bring representatives of allegedly oppressed minorities before the United Nations for hearings.

Otherwise, British Delegate Sir Terrence Shone told the U. N. Trusteeship Committee, the United States could even face the possibility of seeing "a certain eminent singer who has lately been in the news" spread his complaints before a United Nations committee. Shone was referring to Paul Robeson, Negro baritone, a British spokesman confirmed.

The statement came in debate over a Guatemalan resolution to invite natives of southwest Africa to appear and give their views on rule over them by the Union of South Africa, which advocates white supremacy.

The United States offered an amendment to limit representation to spokesmen for "substantial groups" and another to confine their testimony to written statements.

When these were defeated, the United States joined Britain, France, South Africa and 11 other countries in voting against the proposal. Nevertheless, the measure was approved, 25 to 15, with six abstentions.

sation to the injured, severance pay, and extra salary payments. The latter two charges apparently were in connection with closure of the Consulate and discharge of the staff."

In this respect the complaint against Ward resembled that against General Soule in Nanking. The excuse for holding up Soule's exit permit is that he still owes money to Chinese employes of the embassy club there.

The message from Ward, as relayed to Washington, apparently gave no hint whether any outside influence had helped to set him free.

London Expressed Concern

A Foreign Office spokesman in London said yesterday that a day or two before Ward's release the British Government had expressed its "concern" to the Chinese Communists through "unofficial channels."

This was in response to Secretary Acheson's appeal of last Friday to the Foreign Ministers of 30 nations to protest against Ward's imprisonment. Only a few oral comments from foreign governments had been received at the State Department yesterday in answer to Acheson's plea.

The Communists themselves had announced earlier this week that the court in Mukden had finished a long "investigation" of the Ward case, and was about to deliver its verdict.

One effect of Ward's release may be to hasten recognition of the Chinese Communists by British Commonwealth and other foreign governments.

Recognition by the British and other friends of the United States was unthinkable while Ward was in jail. Now, unless there is some new incident of the sort, a number of foreign governments may recognize within a month.

As for the United States, Secretary Acheson said last week that recognition would not even be considered until Ward was free. It may be "considered" now, but there is not the slightest likelihood of a decision until after Congress has started its session in January.

Russia Assails China in U. N.

Satellite Poland has indicated it will take an active role in this fight.

When Vishinsky completed his speech, Kan demanded the floor. He shouted: "Mr. Vishinsky, your mere wish will not put the Chinese Communists in our seats in the Assembly."

Vishinsky and his seven-man delegation laughed out loud as the Nationalist spokesman continued: "If your wish were law then 80 percent of the delegates in the Assembly would be unseated."

Kan, gulping down sips of water, bellowed:

"In a few days we shall present to the Assembly documents and proofs that the Soviet Union has violated the (1945) Chinese-Russian treaty and the United Nations Charter.

When he had finished, Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo pleaded with delegates to stick to the debate on atomic energy.

But Vishinsky took the floor again. He said it was his right as Soviet foreign minister to declare that his government no longer recognized the Nationalists. The Peiping regime is "the only legal government in China," he said, adding: "In the face of the Chinese liberation movement, we cannot consider these pygmies (the Nationalists) as a delegation."

Russia already has severed diplomatic relations with the Chiang government and granted recognition to the Red regime in Peiping.

U. N. Directs 6 Powers To Continue Atom Talks

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—The United Nations Assembly decided tonight to have the five big powers and Canada try again to break the East-West deadlock on atomic energy control.

The Assembly called on these six permanent members of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission to continue their private consultations and explore any possibilities for an accord.

The vote was 49 to 5, with three abstentions. Only the Soviet bloc opposed the plan. The Russians insisted the full 11-nation Atomic Commission should resume its work immediately.

Beating Sound Speed Routine for Douglas Skyrocket

Muroc Dry Lake, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP).—The Douglas Skyrocket has exceeded the speed of sound repeatedly in level flight, the Navy announced today. Its maximum speed was not revealed, however.

Several weeks ago, the Navy said the rocket and jet-powered research craft—officially known as D-5582—had exceeded sound's speed in a power glide. Depending on altitude, the speed of sound can be anywhere from 660 to 761 miles per hour.

The formal announcement said: "Passage of the Douglas swept-winged exploratory craft into the supersonic has become routine."

Izvestia Revives Soviet Theme —2 Systems Can Live in Peace

Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP).—Izvestia today revieved the theme that Soviet "peace policy" is based on the belief Communist and capitalist systems can exist side by side in the world.

The Soviet government newspaper quoted from Prime Minister Stalin and Nikolai Lenin, father of the Soviet Union, in a three-column front-page article. Izvestia is the official organ of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

Izvestia linked its statements with the assertion that the Western powers are waging propaganda and taking practical measures for war. This is so, particularly in American and British policies on the atomic question, it said.

(The Izvestia article appeared to be a new propaganda effort to present the Soviet Union as the world's sole warrior for peace.

(The latest repetition of an old theme coincides with the climactic debate on the atomic question in the United Nations Assembly, and the article was printed on the day the American Friends Service Committee, which won the 1947 Nobel peace prize, released in Philadelphia a plan for the U. N. to sponsor a standstill agreement on production of atomic bombs.)

Izvestia underlined the talk Stalin had with Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, in April, 1947, in which Stalin declared, "I adhere to Lenin, who expressed both the possibility and the desire of cooperation" between the two economic systems.

The same idea is stressed in the current issue of New Times, the publication devoted to international affairs. The writer, A. Leonidov, declared the statement that the Soviet Union does not believe in the coexistence of the two systems is a "stupid, dishonest lie."

Izvestia charged the West with preventing cooperation. The newspaper said that the U. S. S. R. stands and will stand for unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons "despite the fact . . . the Soviet Union has possessed an atomic weapon since 1947."

The governments of the United States and Britain, however, "have intentionally created a blind alley on this question," the paper charged. "By the so-called American plan for control they are trying to cover up their refusal to outlaw atomic weapons."

Izvestia charged that President Truman's declaration he would not hesitate to use the atom bomb for the welfare of the United States was an effort to "ignite a war psychosis."

Among the "practical" measures taken, it listed the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Pact, and the preparation of strategic plans under the pact.

On another front, the Communist newspaper Pravda reported some Soviet factory managers are faking statistics to make themselves look good and demanded a tightening of "state discipline."

Senators Find ECA Saved Europe From Communism

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP). — Seven United States Senators said today they are convinced the Marshall Plan has saved western Europe from communism.

"I am encouraged by what we have seen and will so report to the Senate," said Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee's Armed Forces Subcommittee, which the group represents.

Thomas told a news conference: "I am proud of the people of Europe for trying to stand on their own feet." He had some words of praise for Sweden which he had earlier criticized for being inhospitable to his committee.

"Sweden," he said, "is in the best financial condition of any country in the world, to my knowledge. In the United States we have a vast national debt and a vast budget. The Swedish people are going forward and making great progress."

When a Swedish newspaper reporter at the conference asked him to explain a statement made in Vienna last week that "Sweden is just out for some easy money," Thomas replied:

"All countries are out for easy money, and any money they can get from United States taxpayers is easy money."

He repeated his Vienna statement that "Sweden is very suspicious of anybody in uniform as a possible spy."

Other members of the Senatorial party are Democrats Dennis Chavez of New Mexico, John L. McClellan of Arkansas, Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina, Willis Robertson of Virginia and John C. Stennis of Mississippi, and Republican Edward T. Thye of Minnesota.

In brief statements to the reporters, each of the Senators agreed that their tour of Europe had been "gratifying in that we discovered the great amount of good that has been done with the United States taxpayer's money."

The Senators leave tomorrow for a two week tour of England before sailing for home eorly in December. They are to visit French Premier Georges Ridault today.

Thomas commented on their visit to Spain, by declaring "I woult vote for Spain's inclusion in both the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact, if the Administration of the United States and the other Atlantic Pact countries approved it."

The Senators declined to say whether they favored granting of additional financial support to Yugoslavia in that country's stand against Russia.

The Deanwood Civic Association Tuesday set the erection of a community house as one of its goals for 1950.

Meeting in Carver School, Whittingham st. and Lane pl. ne., the group asked that Central High School be turned over to Negro students to ease overcrowding at Cardozo High School. Thirty-five members attended.

Hirohito's Daughter Engaged to Cousin

Tokyo (Wednesday), Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Princess Taka, 20, the second daughter of Emperor Hirohito, is informally engaged to her first cousin, Kosho Otani, 24-year-old violinist and Buddhist priest, the newspaper Yomiuri reported today.

Quakers See 'Brake' on Soviet In Tito Type of Communism

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—Communist nationalism such as that in Yugoslavia may prove one of the tightest brakes on any Russian ambitions, a Quaker study of the "cold war," said today.

This view was embodied in a published working plan for world peace and control of the atomic bomb devised by a 15-man group under auspices of the American Friends Service Committee.

"Insofar as Soviet communism is a national poiltical force," the reports said, "it is likely that any further major extensions would weaken Russian control within the group of Communist states.

"Nationalism similar to that of Yugoslavia would be encountered elsewhere. These Communist nationalisms would likely constitute one of the restraining influences in any substantial program for expansion on which the Soviet Union might embark."

The Friends Committee reiterated its conviction that a Soviet-American war is not inevitable. It recommended anew that atomic stockpiles in both the United States and Russia be placed under United Nations' seal and that the production of all fissionable materials be "halted and verified" pending completion of treaties for control of all kinds of armaments.

It was suggested Germany be unified as a buffer or balancing state, that occupation troops be withdrawn as soon as possible and the now divided Reich be admitted without undue delay to the U. N. community.

Russian confidence, the report suggested, might well be bolstered by a greater readiness on the part of the United States to do business with the Soviets.

Plane to Carry 400 To Europe Studied

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 23 (AP).—The company that builds the mighty B-36 bomber today said it had designed a transport that could carry 100,000 pounds or 400 armed men from the East Coast to western Europe without straining a rivet.

Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. said it had submitted its production design to the Air Force.

The huge transport would be called the C-99. It could haul bigger loads in both size and weight than any aircraft now made or known to be planned.

Convair delivered an XC-99 (X stands for experimental) to the Air Force earlier this year. But its production model of the C-99 would differ from the XC-99 in five important ways:

1. It would have engines of greater horsepower; 2. Easier loading through nose and tail doors; 3. More usable cargo space, increased 57 percent in area; 4. Pressurized crew compartment and upper deck; 5. B-36 type flight deck, including bubble canopy, to afford the pilot greater vision.

The company estimated that 70 percent of the C-99 parts would be common to the B-36, and, like the B-36, the C-99 would be equipped with six pusher-type engines and four-wheel or "roller skate" type landing gears. It would have the same 230-foot wingspan as the B-36, but its double-decked fuselage would be longer and much larger.

The XC-99 last April carried 100,000 pounds of simulated cargo on a test flight—the heaviest load ever taken aloft by an airplane.

Installation of the more powerful engines and improved fuel consumption should enable the C-99 production model to carry a 100,000-pound payload nearly 2000 nautical miles farther than the XC-99 can carry the same load, the company said.

Lilienthal Resigns From AEC Post; No Hint as to Successor

have been to risk some further congressional battles—not necessarily abuot him, but about the atomic program. And a resignation would be difficult while he or the Commission was involved with Congress.

President Truman urged Lilienthal repeatedly to remain. He pleaded to be allowed to leave, and the Chief Executive finally agreed.

Beyond Lilienthal's weariness with office and, in Mr. Truman's words, with more "destructive criticism" than is the tolerable qouta for any one man, Lilienthal had other dissatisfactions.

One was the atmosphere of secrecy connected with atomic energy matters, and what he once called the "senseless business of choking ourselves" with the unnecessarily strait-jacketing secrecy restrictions insisted upon by Congress.

A second were the "kibitzing committees" with which the AEC is surrounded and with which it must work. One is the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. Another is the Military Liasion Committee. Less irritating are 13 more technical advisory boards, committees and panels.

A third factor is thought to be a growing conviction of Lilienthal that he might be able to do more good in some role other than atomic armorer to the Nation. He is reported, in fact, to doubt very much that more and bigger atomic bombs are the whole answer the United States should make to the threat of Russia. It is probable he would like to look for and talk about other answers.

A fourth dissatisfaction is one that plagues most Federal officials—money. Lilienthal makes no bones about the fact that he is without financial reserves. In his letter to the President, he pointed out that his years in public life had been "very rewarding, in every way except financially."

In an interview last night, Lilienthal admitted that he might likely "shoot my mouth"—and about atomic energy, among other things.

"Had Enough of Senate"

Later he grinned when questioned by one reporter about a suggestion that he might run for the Senate.

"Don't you think I've had enough of the Senate?" he asked.

"I want to have the right of an ordinary citizen to talk about all kinds of subjects and not just atomic energy," he said, adding that he long had had an interest in "labor matters."

He denied he was resigning because of any impending change in the United States policy on international control of atomic energy.

There was not a vestige of a hint in Washington last night as to who might be Lilienthal's successor. White House sources admitted that the job will be inordinately difficult to fill.

In his letter to Lilienthal, the President said he had confidence that Lilienthal could be prevailed upon to remain beyond the termination date set, if that were necessary to "deal with problems which may not have been determined by the end of the year."

Mr. Truman said he agreed to Lilienthal's resignation "reluctantly and with the utmost regret." But, he said, "you have indeed, through almost 20 consecutive years of public service in tough pioneering jobs—always under pressure and often under destructive criticism—earned the right to return to private life."

"You brought to your duties not only knowledge but wisdom," Mr. Truman wrote. "Your reward, I believe, will be in the consciousness of your country's confidence in what you have done and the way in which you have done it."

Lilienthal, in his turn, paid Mr. Truman high compliments as a chief under whom he was pleased to work. In his letter of resignation he said to the President:

"That so much has been accomplished in the face of not inconsiderable difficulties in these past three years has been in large measure due to the stimulus of the personal leadership you have provided."

He added that he was happy that the President felt his request could be granted by reason of Mr. Truman's "special knowledge of the sound condition" of the country's atomic program.

Comment on Lilienthal Resignation Is Varied

By the United Press

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, (R., Iowa) forecast last night that David E. Lilienthal's resignation from the Atomic Energy Commission will be good for the country, but some Congressmen and scientists thought otherwise.

"I look forward to a new stimulation in our atomic program in the future," he told reporters in Des Moines. He emphasized he had "no personal animosity" toward Lilienthal and was interested only in seeing America "maintain preeminence" in the atomic field.

Senator Kenneth D. McKellar, (D., Tenn.) a bitter foe of Lilienthal, issued a five-word statement at Memphis: "The country is better off."

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) referred indirectly to Hickenlooper's attack in extending "humble thanks" to Lilienthal for "the job he has done in trying conditions."

"The country is greatly in Mr. Lilienthal's debt," Douglas said, "and I hope he knows—despite certain criticism against him—that the great mass of Americans recognize the splendid work he has done."

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) said the resignation is "very much to be regretted because Mr. Lilienthal has rendered most valuable service to his country."

Other comment on the resignation:

Dr. Arthur Jaffe of Chicago, noted atomic scientist: "The resignation is a great loss. Lilienthal knows how to do things on a big scale—he was a big time manager.

Brussels Pact Nations Keep Arms Setup

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—The five Brussels allies announced tonight they will keep their own tight little defense machine intact instead of melting fully into the North Atlantic Treaty.

After an all-day meeting, defense ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg said the present defense setup of "Western Union" will remain "an integral part of the organizations under the Brussels Treaty."

This decision defeated the British stand for gradual absorption of the Brussels treaty machine by the 12-nation North Atlantic Pact organization, which is backed by United States money and force.

Continental members of the Western Union family held out for continuing the Brussels defense plan because it commits each member to automatic military help for 50 years. The Atlantic Pact is a 20-year alliance which does not bind its members to give automatic aid in case of war.

British Wage-Freeze Gets Unions' Backing

However, the committee decided to ask for special "incentive payments" for low-paid workers.

Hiss Plans to Test Chambers' Sanity

New York, Nov. 23 (NYHT).—Defense counsel in the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss indicated today that another attempt will be made to show that Whittaker Chambers, star Government witness, is not mentally sound.

Claude B. Cross, trial counsel for Hiss told the court when Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy objected to one of his questions:

"I am laying the foundation for psychiatric testimony." Judge Henry W. Goddard thereupon allowed him to ask Chambers if his brother, Richard Godfrey Chambers, had committed suicide. Chambers said he did.

Cross asked if Richard had asked Whittaker Chambers to join a suicide pact with him, and Judge Goddard interrupted: "Do we need to go into this?"

"It is a fact that psychiatrists place reliance on a man's past history, or so I believe," Cross answered. The question was permitted, and Chambers answered again: "He did."

Dr. Carl Binger, psychiatrist who listened to most of Chamber's testimony in the first trial in June, has not yet appeared in the courtroom. At the first trial, Judge Samuel H. Kaufman refused to allow Dr. Binger to testify concerning Chambers's mental condition, but permitted Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief defense attorney at that trial, to read Dr. Binger a 45-minute hypothetical question summing up all the questionable incidents of Chambers's personal life. Then Judge Kaufman told the jury they could judge for themselves.

Less Attention to Oddities

In a little over two days of cross-examination Cross has so far given the oddities in Chamber's personal background much less melodramatic emphasis than Stryker did.

Cross gave more attention today to details of the incidents with which Chambers seeks to support his main charge against Hiss. He has accused Hiss of giving him secret Government documents and other papers to be transmitted to a Communist spy ring in the first three months of 1938. Mr. Hiss is on trial in United States District Court on a two-count indictment alleging that he perjured himself when he denied this charge.

Chambers gave for the first time a description of the man he has called Colonel Bykov, identified as the Soviet master spy for whom he worked. Chambers said he actually knew the man at the time as Peter, and only found out later that his name was Colonel Bykov.

"About Your Height"

"He was about your height," Chambers said to Cross, who is about 5 feet 5 with grey hair and a round cherubic face. "He had reddish brown eyes, somewhat sandy eyelashes, a very pointed nose, somewhat sanguine face and a slight reddish tint in his hair. He was balding, getting thin at least at the temples."

"What was his weight?" Cross asked.

"About 155 pounds, perhaps," Mr. Chambers said, approximating Cross's apparent weight.

Chambers said he could not recall many of the details he was asked for, especially those relating to the three automobile trips he says he took with Hiss between 1935 and 1937, as well as details of his conversations with Colonel Bykov.

In general Chambers said his procedure was to go from his place of employment in downtown Washington to Hiss' home in Georgetown, between 4:30 and 6 p. m., take the documents to Felix Inslerman in Baltimore to be photographed, return with them to Georgetown later the same night, then return to his own home in Baltimore about 1 or 2 a. m., and return to work in Washington at 9 a. m. the next day. Sometimes, he said, Felix met him in Washington instead of Baltimore.

Chambers' Story Checked

Where Chambers' memory for details was more definite Cross showed from his testimony that he had had an opportunity to check his story, and had sometimes changed his story after checking it. All were minor details.

Testifies With Detachment

For all but one space of five or ten minutes Chambers testified with his customary air of complete emotionless detachment, sparring alertly with the defense attorney in a contest of wits and wearing a calm and slightly supercilious expression.

The exception came when Mr. Cross read two of his poems, "Tandaradei," which is erotic, and "Oct. 21, 1926," a mystical and obscure work written in memory of his brother's death. Between the two readings Cross made his references to the suicide and the "psychiatric testimony."

Poverty Plea Rejected; Man Gets Jail Term

Refusing to be swayed by a plea of poverty, Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday sentenced a 40-year-old alcoholic to serve 2 to 6 years in prison for attempting to have carnal relations with his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Given the sentence was James J. Bradley, of 218 E st. nw. He had been indicted for carnal knowledge but was allowed to plead to the lesser charge.

The District Court jurist noted that he had given much thought to "this serious case." He said that Bradley lived in impoverished circumstances, and that his family's quarters were poor and crowded.

"But defendant, as poor as he is, has enough to spend money on liquor. He is an alcoholic and consumes quite a lot of whisky. He should spend this money on his family. This is not like a person struggling against poverty. He is not entitled to very much consideration," said the judge.

In another case, Andy Bryson, 50, of 2425 K st. nw., was sentenced to serve 7 to 21 years in prison for second-degree murder in the shooting of his neighbor, Charles W. Butler, 48, of 2423 K st. nw. last June.

Bryson had been indicted for first-degree murder but pleaded guilty to the second-degree charge. He shot Butler during an altercation. Bryson claimed he was harrassed by Butler.

Dead Sister's Hex Still Pursues Him, Prisoner Says

Roanoke Rapids, N. C., Nov. 23 (U.P.).—A youth who said he killed his sister to save himself from her "hex" has not eaten for six days and believes he is still under her spell, Sheriff H. A. House said today.

The sheriff said Thurman Barnes, 21, was wasting away and that he constantly muttered to himself in his cell.

Barnes has not eaten since his arrest Friday on charges of killing his sister and her husband with a .22 rifle, House said.

Barnes told officers his sister, Louise Scott, was "an artist in witchcraft." He said she had put a "hex" on him and that he killed her to save his own life, the sheriff said.

"Now he says that didn't break the hex and he is getting worse," Sheriff House added.

Thanksgiving Feast For Animals Urged

Thanksgiving Day, the Animal Protective Association said yesterday, is the time for all good Washington youngsters to come to the aid of the District's birds and wild animals.

The association's humane education department suggested that the kids begin leaving food for birds and squirrels today—and continue the habit throughout the year.

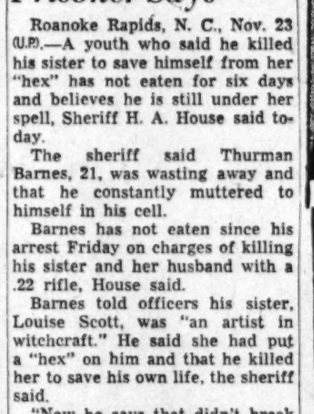
County May Act In Arlington Hall Parking Problem

County action to restrict parking in the area near the Army's Arlington Hall installation was indicated Tuesday by officials at a meeting in Arlington Courthouse attended by residents of the section, Army and county aides.

Residents, troubled by the parking problem, have complained to the County Board at two successive meetings that they cannot park their cars in the street or even in their driveways because Government employes have "hogged" all the space.

Lieut. Col. Charles H. Reed, of the Arlington Hall Station, said there was ample space at Arlington Hall for everyone to park, but that employes have had to meet "certain requirements" to park inside the area, hence have used space outside the hall to park their cars.

No formal action was announced to correct the situation other than the indication that the county might instigate parking restrictions in the area.



Gambling Jury Gets 'Snags' Lewis Case, Ponders Into Night

and Ellis L. Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.

The jury started deliberations at 4:40 p. m. after counsel had spent five hours summing up. Prosecutor Hitz told the jury "there are not the small-fry here. We have pick-up men, runners, clerks, accountants and William "Snags" Lewis himself, the brains of the outfit, the creator. The entire numbers lottery setup is in this courtroom."

"No one can say this wasn't a gambling establishment," Hitz said, "not even the defense counsel. They will try and tell you this gambling establishment was not concerned with violating District law. But five of the defendants admitted they were engaged in the numbers business in Washington. We have proved that the syndicate banked in Washington, in one case under an alias. We have proved that numbers bets were telephoned from the District to these headquarters."

Hitz urged the jury to "see that Snags is put into the pickle business or somewhere else, like Sam Beard, one of his predecessors." Beard, who once told a Congressional committee that he was a gambler, now describes himself as a "pickle merchant."

Defense counsel contended the Government had not proved violation of the District law.

William H. Collins and Bernard Margolius, representing Lewis, branded the Government's case as "the wildest possible speculation and conjecture." Both asked the jury to presume the Bladensburg bungalow, where all defendants were arrested, was a gambling establishment, and then asked the jury if the Government had proved that it violated District law.

Myron G. Ehrlich, who with Charles E. Ford represents the other 13 defendants, charged that five Government witnesses, "the only real witnesses they had," perjured themselves.

Ford made the courtroom walls ring with one of his patented summations. He shouted that the Government had attempted to "wrap the case up in cellophane." He was referring to three numbers slips a Washington man had admitted writing. The slips were found on the Lewis raid.

Edward L. Carey, assistant prosecutor, rebutted defense arguments.

Judge McGuire told the jury it could find one or all of the defendants guilty or not guilty, or find some guilty and some innocent. He explained the meaning of the two-count indictment, one charging the substantive offsense of operating a lottery, and the second of conspiring to violate the law.

The Government charged the defendants ran a 14-million-dollars-a-year gambling syndicate from this room. This figure was determined by multiplying the cash found on the premises—more than $25,000—by 300, the number of days in a year that the numbers lottery is conducted. This figure was then doubled, because the Government contends as many people play the numbers on credit as for cash.

Other evidence seized included thousaands of numbers slips, a racing ticker bringing up-to-the-minute race results, 14 adding machines, two automatic pistols, cartridges, racing forms, two telephones, one with two hand sets, and quantities of ticker tape. The entrance to the room was equipped with a "one-way peephole," transparent inside and opaque outside.

Throughout the trial and during the six months between the arrest and the trial, defense strategy was to keep the case from the jury. At an estimated expense of $50,000 to the defendants, their lawyers were in District Court almost steadily from March 25 until yesterday.

Defense lawyers filed motions to dismiss indictments against the defendants, to suppress evidence seized, to quash the search-and-arrest warrants and to demand bills of particulars, specifying where and when and how the lottery and conspiracy offenses were alleged to have occurred. They were denied all motions except for bills of particulars.

The search-and-arrest warrants were the chief targets for defense objections. The warrants were issued by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on the basis of affidavits sworn to by Bernice Franklin, red-headed former waitress and former girl friend of an indicted gambler.

Miss Franklin was never put on the stand by the Government, although she was under subpena throughout the trial.

Another key figure in the raid and subsequent preparation of the case never appeared as a Government witness. He is Downey Rice, former FBI agent, hired by the special grand jury to assist in the gambling investigation and retained by Fay as a special consultant and adviser. The defense contended in all its court fights that Rice had no legal authority.

Thirty-six men were indicted. Two of them have died—Garner S. Barbour, proprietor of Barber's Newsstand at 427 10th st. nw., and Walter (Sonny) Mason, 760 Newton pl. nw. Barbour died of a heart attack less than a month after he was indicted and Mason shot himself to death at his home two weeks later.

The Government dropped charges against a third, Simon Best, 1444 W st. nw., after he was convicted by Virginia authorities for a similar offense.

Prosecution of a fourth, Henry E. Fish, 1007 K st. nw., was dropped by Fay on November 19 because of "insufficient evidence." Fish was a waiter at Hammel's Restaurant, 416 10th st. nw., one of the eight places raided March 25.

Foreman of the Lewis jury is Condon M. Flynn, 59, 701 9th st. nw., General Accounting Office transportation expert. Others are: Carroll Albert Herget, 26, 3023 14th st. st. nw., Navy Department clerk; Mrs. Mildred Johnson, 42, 4410 Falls Terrace, se., Veterans Administration clerk; Howard Brice, 59, 300 K st. se., chauffeur; Irving Huber Carr, 52, 3625 Nichols ave. se.; Calle Alfred Carrello, 44, 3016 M pl. se., Agriculture Department technician; Samuel H. McKinney, 43, 3904 13th st. nw., Washington Gas Co.; Mrs. Rae F. Coles, 32, 1124 Columbia rd., nw., Bureau of Engraving and Printing assistant; Roland A. Haley, 39, 4624 Sargent rd. ne., Government Printing Office; Mrs. Marguerite C. Dent, 42, 2803 Courtland pl. nw., seamstress; Charles E. McGowan, 57, 428 Emerson st. nw., Warner Bros. contact manager; and Adolphe Gadol Meyer, 41, 2002 Perry st. ne., unemployed.

Victim Saves $230 Bankroll in Holdup

Some $230 worth of proof that the hand of a victim can be quicker than the eyes of three alleged robbers was offered by Prince George police yesterday.

They told the story this way:

Ernest W. Howard, 25, of 405 Kentucky ave. se., met three men in a Washington tavern. After visiting other taverns, they agreed to head for Baltimore. Instead, Howard found himself being driven in a cab to the vicinity of Prince Georges Hospital in Cheverly, Md.

At gunpoint, they ordered him out of the cab, forced him to surrender some $18.

Later, Howard told police with a wry smile of satisfaction, as he alighted from the cab he dropped a roll of $230 to the pavement. And the robbers never spotted it.

Howard said he is currently unemployed and the salvaged roll represents savings as a St. Elizabeth's Hospital clerk.

Police yesterday booked three men for holdup and robbery and held them under $500 bond each for a hearing Monday in Hyattsville police court. Police identified them as:

Meredith B. Dawes, 24, a District cabbie, of 4100 Parkwood rd., Cottage City, Md.; Henry B. White, 23, of 119 Massachusetts ave. nw., and Roland J. Gauthier, 21, of 902 6th st. nw.

Independent Survey Shows: Most Women Want Something for the Home for Christmas

According to a recent survey 34% of the women questioned said they want Household Goods for Christmas! Among others preferred, wearing apparel received 13% of their votes, jewelry 5%. This annual survey was made in connection with a nation-wide study, conducted in and around more than 75 cities . . . and the tabulated results provide a strong indication of women's actual gift preferences for Christmas 1949.

So Nee's are perfectly correct in saying—"Give something for the home—and you'll be sure your gift is just what she wants most!" For 69 Christmases, Nees have catered to the good taste of Washington home-makers. This year, more than ever, it is part of a happy Washington tradition to give and receive Dreamhouse Furniture from Nees!

after the inaugural expenses were met, the balance should be turned over to the Chest.

Hildreth said later that the $25,000 contribution is only a part of what his committee expects to present. He said "probably more than $20,000" more will be turned over as soon as the Internal Revenue Bureau clears the committee for tax purposes. He said the committee might hold some funds for the 1953 inauguration.

New pledges reported by units yesterday were: Fairfax County, 601 for $4448, to make the total $24,915 or 60.28 per cent; Montgomery County, 1670 for $13,685, for a total of $55,781 or 41.01 per cent; Prince Georges County, 2447 for $10,765 for a total of $29,519 or 48.84 per cent; Arlington County, 943 for $7573, for a total of $32,471, or 53.11 percent; Alexandria, $1138 for $10,471, to make the total $58,131.22 or 86.46 percent.

New Pledges Here

In Washington, new pledges reported were: Government, 9511 for $60,470 adding up to $1,408,375 or 88.83 percent of the goal: Business Unit I, 6752 for $85,621.76 to make $1,105,308 or 75.32 percent of the quota; Business Unit II, 1102 for $20,006 to make $153,746 or 63.58 percent, and Residential, 535 for $9552, to make $244,668 or 73.83 percent.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, traced the eight degrees in the duty of charity.

The first and lowest degree, he said, is to give but with reluctance. The eighth and final degree, he said, is to anticipate charity by preventing poverty.

He declared that the real purpose of the Community Chest is more than helping the destitute but a "great preventive job of undergirding the community" against social ills.

A general report luncheon has been scheduled for November 29 at the Washington Hotel. Business Unit II will hold a report meeting in the mural room of the Washington on November 30 and all other city units will hold individual report meetings on December 1.

Return of $116 Brightens Thanksgiving for 2 Families him the money she had found.

The money and the report on its finding eventually went to police headquarters and to the hands of Inspector Robert Pearce, chief property clerk of the police department.

Yesterday morning McGahey, who is 34 and an assistant director of traffic at Union Station, called upon Pearce and put in a claim for the money. He offered this evidence:

1. A pay stub for $126 which he received Tuesday afternoon for two weeks' pay.

2—A hole in the left hand pocket of his trousers.

He also described the denominations of the bills and said how many there were of each. Pearce verified McGahey's claim that his loss had been reported to Prince Georges County police.

Pearce gave McGahey the money.

McGahey said that Tuesday after he was paid a friend drove him to 4th and H sts. ne., where McGahey bought a fuel pump for his car. Later, McGahey got out of the car at 4th and Bryant sts. ne. (where the money was found) to buy several bottles of beer.

From there, the friend drove to a service station at Ethan Allen ave. and New Hampshire ave. extended, in Prince Georges County, where McGahey's car was parked.

It was there that McGahey first discovered his loss. He searched for his money at the service station until it got dark.

"I didn't think I would ever see it again," McGahey said yesterday, "but I prayed that I would get it back."

McGahey, who is married and has a daughter, wanted to reward Mrs. Dorsch but she said his thanks would be ample.

"After all, Thanksgiving was close and I wanted whoever owned it to have it," she said.

However, McGahey insisted on presenting Mrs. Dorsch with a $20 bill.

Forest Grove P-TA Elects Officers, Adopts By-laws

Robert Sherwin, of 10 Myrtle st., Silver Spring, has been elected president of the recently formed Forest Grove Elementary Parent-Teacher Association.

Other officers elected at the group's second meeting Tuesday at the school, Forest Glen rd. near Sligo Creek pkwy., Silver Spring, were: Mrs. Samuel Efron, vice president; Albert Dieffenbach, treasurer; Mrs. Harold Kerr, recording secretary, and Mrs. George Taylor, corresponding secretary.

The club adopted a set of by-laws prepared by a committee

Today's Feast Costs 40c Less On the Average

That turkey dinner you will eat today, if you are the average Washington family, cost you $5.07, just 40 cents less than last year.

But back in 1941 the same meal cost only $2.60. The Bureau of Labor Statistics gave out the figures after a check of local prices.

Biggest saving was in the cost of the bird itself. BLS figured a 12-pounder should have cost around $7.56, down from $8.88. Also down were eggs, applies, potatoes and cranberry jelly. But the tags were higher on coffee, lettuce, celery, carrots. Bread and milk were unchanged.

If your family is the average one, the four of you should make away with five pounds of the 12-pound bird. The rest ought to carry you over the weekend, provided you like it creamed, hashed and in soup.

Thanksgiving: Day to Feast —And to Pray

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

"A little more of the white meat please, Mama, and don't worry, I'm saving space for the pumpkin pie."

The familiar words from squeaky voices will sound across many a table here today as thousands of Washingtonians observe Thanksgiving in the traditional manner—turkey dinner at home with the family.

Among them will be President and Mrs. Truman, who will spend the day quietly with relatives and have turkey at Blair House.

Thanks for Blessings

The prompting cause for the original Pilgrim Thanksgiving will be followed through by thousands of Washingtonians, who will give thanks to God for their blessings at special religious services.

Many churches will hold union services, such as the one at 11 a. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw. Roman Catholics, as they have done for the last 41 years, will hold a Pan American mass at 10:30 a. m. at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

Clothes collections being held by several Catholic and Protestant churches for war refugees will continue today.

Thousands, too, will celebrate the day and the weekend in ways that have also become traditional, even though the Pilgrim Fathers didn't originate them: Football games, dances, cocktail parties and the like.

Many Go Out of Town

An untold but vast number celebrated with a trip: Traffic lanes—road, rail and air—began to feel the big push yesterday as a host of the citizenry fled to all parts of the country.

Many Government workers — a Civil Service Commission official estimated 30,000—were taking annual leave Friday to devote the whole weekend to Thanksgiving.

School children have the weekend off anyway and were due to spend it in their devious and mysterious ways, none having anything to do with books.

Weather prospects were about all anyone could ask, considering the season:

Partly cloudy and somewhat colder today, with a high of 48—yesterday's high was 55. Friday: cloudy and moderately cold, a high of 46. Saturday: partly cloudy, high of 50. Sunday: mostly fair, high of 50.

Light Rain Tomorrow

Little if any precipitation was forecast; maybe a light rain Friday.

Here in their new home, and in what must seem to them this incredibly well-fed land, some 30 modern Pilgrims will observe their first Thanksgiving with dinner at 2 p. m. at Beth El Synagogue, 702 Jefferson st. nw.

All of them—except those born since—spent the day last year in the dark displaced persons camps of Europe. Some arrived here as late as Tuesday and most are without relatives in America.

Among those expected at the dinner table are three DP's little young for giblet gravy and sage dressing: Samuel, Leib and Essa, 11-months-old Polish triplets born in a DP camp in Germany. They will be accompanied by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Warszawski, both 32, of 1517 49th ave. ne., Beaver Heights, Md. Warszawski, a weaver by trade, brought his family to this country in September.

Cherry, not Pumpkin, Pie

The dinner, served by the Washington Council of Jewish Women, will have a regular Thanksgiving theme, with turkey as the main dish. But it will be modified to eliminate dishes the DP's were not used to in their former lands—there'll be cherry pie, for example, instead of pumpkin.

The DP's came here under the sponsorship of the Jewish Social Service Agency, most of them from Poland originally others from Czechoslovaki, Hungary and Germany.

For DP's still in the camps—and for others in Europe and Asia, such as war orphans and widows, who have felt the hard brunt of war—Washingtonians will be asked today to share their bounty by inviting a "silent guest" to Thanksgiving dinner and contributing the price of his meal.

The office of CARE, Room 1013 Dupont Circle Building, 1346 Connecticut ave., phone Columbia 9320, will remain open from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. to receive such contributions. No figure is fixed but the cost of a Thanksgiving dinner for four is about $5.

Exact Figure Is $5.07

The exact figure, incidentally, according to a Labor Department estimate, is $5.07—including turkey and pumpkin pie. This may happily be compared to $5.47 for last year and, less happily, to $2.60 for 1941.

In this connection, the supply of turkeys has been good in the District this year—and so has the demand.

By yesterday the turkey population in the District was pretty well cleaned out, according to Francis I. Brooke, chairman of the poultry division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

"Taking a bird's-eye observation of the matter," observed Brooke. "I would say sales this year have been a little heavier than anytime in the past four or five years."

Price-wise, turkeys have been selling about the same as last Thanksgiving, Brooke said, but 10 to 15 cents a pound below last Christmas, when there was a shortage. Average wholesale price for hen turkeys has been 55 to 59 cents a pound, he said, and for tom turkeys from 40½ to 48.

Goose Doesn't Object

Thanksgiving favorites in decending order, Brooke said, have been turkeys, roasting chickens, frying chickens, stewing chickens, ducks, with the goose bringing up a very poor—though, from the goose's own angle, very favorable—last place.

As if turkeys don't have enough trouble getting by Thanksgiving Day alone, many people had a go of it at the bird yesterday.

The 42 Government cafeterias put on a special 50-cent Thanksgiving turkey dinner. It was like lowering a big red flag 2 inches in front of a bull's eyes.

The 33,000 portions of turkey which had been prepared—and which, "on the basis of past experience," cafeteria officials thought would handle all comers—ran out. The 600 turkeys representing "12,000 pounds of white and dark meat" consumed.

Some "4000 disappointed patrons," to use the mild language of a Government Services, Inc., press release, had to fill their stomachs with "beef stew," ham, or creamed mushrooms on toast."

The Word Got Around

"Apparently," said the press release, "individuals who ate early passed the word around, with the result that many Government workers who normally eat elsewhere or limit themselves to light meals at noontime decided to enjoy a low-cost turkey dinner prior to Thanksgiving Day."

Today, of course, is a very special day for children, and various organizations have made plans to reduce the number which might be left out.

A turkey feast and tour of Fort Belvoir is on tap today for 70 children between 10 and 12 from the Industrial School Annex and St. Joseph's Home. This idea originated with the military policemen of Fort Belvoir and the youngsters will be the guests of the Engineer Center Regiment's Headquarters Battalion.

The Silver Leaf Charity Club, of 548 Oklahoma ave. ne., will distribute 210 baskets to children and needy families.

Special activities for the younger fry over the weekend include the annual Thanksgiving swimming races and basketball free-throw contest Friday at the Boys YMCA, 1732 G st. nw.

On Go the Yule Lights

In Silver Spring, citizens will get a special reminder of the next holiday when Christmas lights are turned on tonight in the shopping center for the first time.

Banks and nearly all stores will close today in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia. The District Central Library and branches also will be closed. The Jewish Community Center announced it will be closed for the day—a lecture by Dr. Hymen Ezra Cohen originally scheduled for today was reset for December 1.

A number of pre-Thanksgiving events were held yesterday.

Hundreds of persons attended special Thanksgiving devotion services sponsored by the Military District of Washington at noon on the Pentagon Concourse and Catholic services in the Pentagon auditorium.

A colonial air was added to the concourse services with a special "Old Colonial Color Guard" from the Third Infantry Regiment, Fort Myer, Va., including two soldiers in Revolutionary War attire.

There was also an air of armed-forces unification, with a Navy chaplain giving the sermon, an Air Force chaplain reading the litany of Thanksgiving and an Army chaplain giving the invocation and benediction.

O'Conor to Blast At Recognition Of Red China

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), will deliver the major speech against recognition of the Communist regime in China at a mass meeting in New York City's Carnegie Hall Monday night, his office said here last night.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding Anti-Communist China.

O'Conor has publicly attacked the Communist government of China as "part and parcel of the Moscow Communist International" and an "openly avowed enemy of this country."

He charged yesterday that it "has sought in every way to destroy United States prestige in the Far East by ill-treating United States officials and citizens and condemning United States policies and practices."

Hongkong Smashes Ring Counterfeiting U. S. Bills

Hongkong, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Hongkong police today smashed a ring printing counterfeit United States $100 bank notes.

Five Chinese were held after raids uncovered a printing plant complete with plates and $600,000 in bogus $100 bills. They bore the Federal Reserve Bank of New York mark.

Thanksgiving Day, 1949

This year perhaps many Americans have approached their traditional feast as an opportunity for momentary release from besetting anxieties, rather than as an occasion for gratitude and high rejoicing. It is true that our tables have all their accustomed abundance and more; it is true that there is a greater variety and a wider distribution of material good things than ever. But there is also a sharper realization of the impermanence of all material goods, and something like an acknowledgment that these do not of themselves suffice for the good life.

If this is so, here is a special occasion for gratitude to Providence. Let us, among other reasons, give thanks that we have lost something of the smugness that has so often tempted us not only to take our blessings for granted but even to value them above other graces, such as humility, of which we might stand in need. We have indeed long recognized ourselves as the happiest, the most fortunate of the earth's peoples, but we have been sometimes inclined to give more of the credit to ourselves than to Providence. Now, perhaps, we begin to know better.

The ancient ritual of libation, that is of beginning a feast by pouring a little of the wine upon the ground as a sacrifice, was a visual acknowledgment of man's dependence upon the favor and the bounty of the gods. To omit the libation was to invite their hostility by the sin of pride. In our usage of course the libation has been replaced by some spoken formulary of thanksgiving, but the principle is the same, and it is the principle that matters if our feast has any meaning at all, beyond an excuse for staying home and filling our stomachs beyond their wont.

More Than Charity

In a letter published on this page yesterday a correspondent objected to the inclusion of such agencies as the Boy Scouts in the Community Chest. This objection would be reasonable if the Chest were considered a mere combination of charities. In fact, however, it is a great deal more than that. The Community Chest is a banding together of all the agencies dealing with welfare, whether directly in the form of charity or indirectly in the form of character building, better housing and the like. This is the most enlightened way of meeting community needs at their source.

Charity alone, as we have found in foreign aid, is a negative way of dealing with the problem of need. Handouts often are necessary to prevent immediate want, but the way to restore self-respect, to do away with the drain on mere charity, is to help needy persons to help themselves. This is where the guidance, training and rehabilitating agencies have a tremendously important job.

Few activities are more important in this situation than the Boy Scouts; indeed, they are represented more consistently in Community Chests over the country than any other agency. For the Scouts not only afford a constructive outlet for youthful enthusiasms; they provide invaluable citizenship training. Membership is open to any boy, and the Washington area total is 12,500. However, the Scout program, including such activities as summer camps, is not self-supporting. Of a budget of $142,000, the Scouts depend on the Community Chest for $90,000, the remainder coming from friends of Scouting. This relatively small outlay from the Community Chest must be judged against the much greater probable cost of an increase in juvenile delinquency and crime if the Scouts did not exist.

The same may be said for many of the Chest agencies. Each organization in the Chest has been carefully screened as to purpose and fiscal management, and the public is thoroughly represented on Chest advisory bodies. The idea of banding all agencies together in one drive is to prevent residents from being besieged by many separate campaigns which in the net probably would extract more money. This combination is a convenience to the public; but the test whether it can be continued will be seen in how far the community digs into its pockets. The effects of four successive failures to reach the goal are cumulative, and the consequences of a fifth failure would be appalling. Yesterday's tally of $3,112,790, or 78 percent of the goal, is encouraging but not yet good enough. This Thanksgiving Day is a fitting occasion for each citizen to ask himself whether he has done his part.

Ward And After

The Communists have saved face by holding a trial of Angus Ward and passing sentence, but their deportation order, by way of a commutation of sentence, is in effect what this Government had been asking, and so everybody's face seems to have been saved. However, the release of Angus Ward while leaving a feeling of relief, does not end the mystery. All kinds of explanations, aside from the Communist allegation that Mr. Ward had committed the offense of striking a servant, have been advanced. In the United States one school thinks that the Communists were bent upon rubbing the American nose in the dust. Another insists that the affront was a reprisal for the arrest of Gubitchev, the U. N. official who is now on trial in the spy case in New York with Judith Coplon. From China the theory has been reported that the arrest was a desperate effort by the Soviet to prevent American recognition of the Peking government. But when all is said and done, Mr. Acheson is entitled to a feeling of satisfaction that the Consul General was freed so soon after the Secretary had made his mild-looking request to 30 governments for representations to Peking in behalf of Mr. Ward.

The possibility that this proceeding implied that the whole matter might be aired in the United Nations could not be dismissed by the Peking authorities. The Communists in Peking have an arrogance beyond all reckoning. Nevertheless they must be just as much alive to the value of U. N. membership as the Soviet Union and Soviet satellites. The Acheson move must have appeared to them as an impediment to their request, circulated through the Polish delegate, that the Nationalist be unseated as China's delegate, with the implication that the place belonged to Communist China. The move likewise would have had the effect of creating a solid phalanx of nonrecognitionists on the part of most of the foreign powers—because the case at issue carried a principle of the utmost sginificance to all nations. The principle, of course, was the protection of diplomatic and consular personnel. Such a prospect of ranging a goodly part of the world against them cannot have been immaterial to the Peking authorities.

There are many questions that are left for answer by the Ward episode. One is the standing, in the light of this infraction of civilized usage, of diplomatic and consular personnel. We hope that some clarification of status and rights will be sought for general adherence. Gentlemen's agreements are in order in a world of gentlemen, but this example shows that this isn't a world of gentlemen. Another question is the extent that the Chinese Communists have any authority at all in Manchuria. It looks as if the Russians are in full control, for even a school child would not be guilty of asking for something and then doing something which prevented any response to the request, and the Communists, after all, are hardly school children. The inference is that the Chinese no longer have a say in the Manchurian territory beyond the Great Wall.

The thought obtrudes that one of these days the Russians might overplay their hand, if, indeed, they did not overplay it in the Ward matter. This is mere speculation, but it is founded on Chinese psychology, and, indeed, on experience. There are such things as public opinion and a sense of history in China. In their race memory the Chinese are aware of Russian aggression—the seventeenth century loss of the rich and immense Amur Valley abutting upon Manchuria. This memory will be revived by the spotlight that has been put on the Russian hand in Manchuria, and, one day or other, an irredentism is bound to develop at Russia's expense. There is a memory, too, of 1927. In that year the Russians, then backing Chiang Kai-shek and his fellow-traveling Kuomintang, went too far, and overnight found themselves extruded from influence, and running for their lives. In the present intervention the Russians, till the Ward case, have played their hand with care and skill, but the Chinese are anything but puppets—and a day of reckoning may be dawning for those whom the Chinese think of as "barbarians from outside the Wall."

Age Of Greatness

It appears that the paintings, tapestries, goldsmiths' and armorers' work and other pieces of art from the famous Habsburg collections, now on exhibition at the National Gallery, are just about the most popular attraction in Washington. Last Sunday about 11,000 more persons went to see them than went to watch the Redskins at Griffith Stadium, although it was almost perfect football weather. We have not much doubt that if the gallery were open in the evening, the attendance figures would come close to equaling those of all the movie theaters and night clubs put together. It was much the same story, you remember, when the German collections were on exhibition about a year and a half ago.

This cannot be explained entirely on the grounds of publicity and curiosity, or by the fact that admission to the gallery costs nothing. It seems to betoken a kind of hunger for something that is normally absent from our lives. Nor would it be even enough to say that it is only the hunger for beauty, which at least in rudimentary form probably exists in every human being. We suspect that it is very largely nostalgic and not unrelated to the apocalyptic anxieties of our age. So much of the past has been obliterated in the last 10 years, so many traditions uprooted and destroyed, that there is the feeling that such experiences cannot be safely deferred.

This impression is heightened by the character of the collection itself. These masterpieces of the High Renaissance, many or most of them long familiar through reproductions, represent an historical atmosphere enviably different from the one in which we dwell. It was the bright and buoyant morning of the humanistic world. The paintings reflect the boundless optimism and the insatiable interests of a time when the whole natural universe had been invested with a new and wonderful fascination. It was a time of heroic passions and appetites. The age, having rediscovered pagan antiquity, strove to imitate it in everything—except simplicity. Everything was metamorphosed upon the grand scale, especially man. And it was this wonderful sense of the importance of everything human, including flesh, that contrasts so sharply with our sense of weakness and insignificance.

Jimmy's Place

The career of James A. LaFontaine was a testimonial to the truism that law sometimes reflects the aspirations or ideals rather than the actual mores of a community. He cut a considerable figure in Washington life, providing a kind of service desired by a large number of persons living in the area. Yet his business, conducted openly in a well-known establishment known as "Jimmy's Place" just beyond the District line on Bladensburg rd., was entirely outside the law.

Jimmy LaFontaine's business was gambling but he was not, at least in the old-fashioned sense of the word, a gangster. It is said that he abhorred violence. He was one of a type of illegal operators that began to come into prominence after the repeal of prohibition and after the gunmen and killers spawned by prohibition had been interned or interred. Frankie Costello and Frank Erickson and Joe Adonis are even better known examples of this contemporary type, and their far-flung enterprises will be described in a series of articles by Edward T. Folliard to be published in The Washington Post starting Sunday.

Jimmy's Place had a reputation for being absolutely on the level. It was not supposed to be a sucker joint but was operated for grown men who wanted to gamble and were presumably old enough to know what they were doing. No doubt some highly reputable members of the community were among its regular patrons. No doubt also some ne'er-do-well juveniles and irresponsible heads of families went there to lose money they could not afford and had no right to lose. There are tales about Jimmy's generosity to some of those who were taken to the cleaners in his establishment; but these are apt to be romantic. Gambling is not a business that can be conducted without heartbreak and the moral corruption of those who become addicted to it.

And of course there is another kind of corruption inescapably associated with gambling. It can be conducted on an organized scale, as it was at Jimmy's Place, only through the connivance, and thus the corruption, of the police. The result of this is certain to be felt in many other aspects of community life. It is a tribute to the Metropolitan Police Department of Washington that Jimmy LaFontaine had to go outside the District and an ineffaceable stigma on the law-enforcement officers of Prince Georges County, Md., that he carried on his business there with only occasional and apparently perfunctory harassment, just enough, probably, to make sure that he paid for his protection.

The obvious inference is that, on the whole, the people of Prince Georges County didn't really want his place closed; anyway, they didn't insist that their police close it. Because he was, according to his lights, a square guy, Jimmy LaFontaine will be missed and remembered with affection by a number of decent people. If he is missed enough, his place will be filled before long by someone else, the law and the law-enforcement officers to the contrary notwithstanding. And the community will be the worse for it.

Unemployment Benefits

The District's scale of unemployment insurance payments, like the old 40-cent wage minimum established under the Federal wage-hour law, has become outmoded owing to the rise in living costs. Benefits that once seemed fairly generous have become inadequate. Moreover, the high level of local employment has kept down payments from the insurance fund, which is now about 15 times as large as the amount disbursed annually in the form of benefits. Without the addition of a single penny to payroll levies on District employers, therefore, unemployment benefits could safely be increased and the payment periods lengthened.

The District Unemployment Compensation Commission is accordingly drafting a bill for introduction at the next session of Congress to eliminate the one-week waiting period before payments begin; raise maximum payments from $20 to $30 per week, and increase the number of weekly payments to 26 instead of 20. This proposal should have strong backing from the entire community, not only in justice to the unemployed but for reasons of self-interest. For larger benefits and longer periods of payment would reduce the numbers of unemployed forced to rely on public or private charity to supplement insurance payments and thus reduce District expenditures for relief purposes. Employers as well as other taxpayers would share the benefits, since the increase in payments would be financed from a huge accumulated fund that cannot be used for other purposes.

Youth's Political Role

The most outstanding feature of the convention of the Young Democrats at Chattanooga, Tenn., last week was the manner in which they followed the path of the senior Democratic organization. In voting for the civil rights program the same geographic alignment was maintained. The election of the national chairman was preceded by maneuvers on the part of the national committee in order to select its own choice by hinting that it "frowns" on almost anybody else's nomination.

The danger is not so much in the inference or in the attempt of the senior organization to influence the Young Democrats' decisions as it is in the anxiety of the Young Democrats to fulfill the wishes and act as a carbon copy of their senior organization.

The role of the youth in politics is to initiate and precipitate constructive change. In this epoch of revolutionary changes in the various fields of human activities, the responsiveness of the human mind is the essential criterion of its contributive power. As men grow older their response to the challenges of our time becomes less articulate; they engender a conservative disposition and an unwillingness to adapt themselves to the new and the radical deviations from situations they considered as normal patterns and established institutions.

Youth on the other hand is more flexible and dynamic. They must not frustrate their incentive and capacity by a priori notions and strict adherence to principles and performances done by their forefathers just because at one time their validity was an accepted fact. The path of human progress is strewn with dead principles and concepts, which were once living ingredients of a past system or philosophy.

The immediate need, I think, is a change in the machinery of relations between the national organizations and their various "young" branches, in order that those "young Democrats, Republicans, Liberals, etc.," be capable of holding the initiative their name implies or else change their names to "junior Democrats, junior Republicans, etc." with whatever the term "junior" implies.

More Holidays

Recently I read that Congressman Kenneth B. Keating of New York had, at the behest of a patriotic organization, introduced a bill making the date of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address "a day of national observance."

Assuming that this would mean still another national holiday to interrupt the orderly course of our daily chore and stint, I for one cry Help! Help! especially since we already have one national holiday in honor of the Great Emancipator.

Now that it is past, I respectfully ask, Why an Armistice Day? If the answer is to celebrate the winning of World War I, I'd answer that the end result of that war settled nothing. If it be argued that it is in veneration of the illustrious dead who fell in this war I'd point to the fact that we already have Memorial Day to honor our heroes of all wars.

In February, the shortest month of the year, we have two national holidays—Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays. We keep adding to the total number with no compensating elimination. If the time lost, even in the case of the banks and postoffices, were computed in terms of money, it might startle us out of our existing complacency.

Isn't it about time to call a halt on our policy of addition without subtraction?

Too Many Cabs

A few months ago there was quite a little talk of passing in Congress a piece of legislation which would limit the number of taxicabs on the streets of Washington. I must agree; there are entirely too many of them. However, it is inconsistent with the past conduct of the various companies for them to state that the reason they favored this type of legislation was "to help the cab driver."

There are very few if any true taxicab companies in Washington, D. C. They are virtually all automobile dealers. The association or company buys the cars on a dealer basis and then resells them to the drivers.

Just ask the professional cab driver what is wrong with the business and he will recite the following evils! There are too many cabs. Everyone and anyone who so desires has and drives a cab. There are more part-time drivers than is commonly supposed—Federal and District employes, carpenters, bricklayers, bus and streetcar operators. This should not be permitted. A person who is tired is not a safe driver.

What this congressional limitation of taxicabs would lead to is a monopoly of the cab industry. It would not attempt to regulate the number of drivers, but only the number of cabs. This would bring about a shortage of the number of cabs available to the rental driver, thus enabling the fleet operators to charge a more exorbitant rental price.

Distorted Art

What an excellent chance to evaluate our "modern" art and the modern painter! The two exhibits: the Austrian and that of our local painters at the Corcoran.

Go to the National first and then take a cab swiftly to the Corcoran, so that none of the flavor and depth of beauty has left your eyes and imagination before the thin, flat, weak little daubs at the Corcoran appear for comparison.

I know the standard argument: the new represent our present civilization in all its pitiful uncertainty and with all its multitude of neuroses, etc. Why don't these painters get out and see our civilization with its roaring mills, its cheering crowds at the football games, its roads crowded with cars full of eager and happy families off on their idea of seeing the country? Why don't they look into the homes of millions of thriving and prosperous men and women living full and energetic lives?

Let's look at another aspect of this modern school—of all art. Art has in it the essential idea of beauty—of an appeal to our esthetic senses—of the translation of thought, experience and belief into terms of grace, splendor and charm. That doesn't mean that only the pleasant must be pictured. You can name innumerable works of art showing the horror and bitterness of life by the older masters. But they were instinct with the beauty of line, proportion, color and depth. Beauty is not skin-deep!

That is why, of course, we thrill to the magnificent canvases at the National and that is why, too, the little child's drawings at the Corcoran leave us not only untouched but weary and disgusted. Our modern artists either cannot or will not present life to us as we see it every day all around us.

"Issues In China"

Your November 19 editorial, "Issues in China," points up, in my opinion, the real China issue; namely, the issue of "equal opportunity for all," which was our guiding principle in our relations with China for 45 years.

On February 11, 1945, at Yalta, in a formal agreement with Britain and Russia, we recognized Russia's "preeminent" interests in Manchuria. The next step is the one you advocate, namely, to "send Mr. Jessup to Peking to talk business with the Communist government, to which we have never even accorded belligerent rights." This, in effect, is to recognize Russia's "preeminent" interests in all of China now held by their satellites, the Chinese Communists.

In 1900 we were faced with a similar situation in China. The Boxers were challenging the Manchus. They were killing and raping American missionaries. The foreign legations were under siege in Peking. The Empress Dowager had turned the anti-Manchu movement into an anti-foreign movement.

We did not send our emissaries to Peking to talk business with the Boxers. We did not accord the Boxers belligerent rights. Instead, a foreign allied military force marched on Peking, relieved the legations, rescued our diplomats and imposed an indemnity on China for the cost of the expedition and the damage done. Meanwhile, John Hay had gotten commitments from all the powers that none was to exercise "preeminent" rights anywhere in China, to the exclusion of the others. This open door policy was reaffirmed in the Nine Power Treaty in 1922.

The point is that we did not say "we must get the Empress Dowager off our necks, disown the Manchus as the Chinese themselves have." We recognized that "the Chinese" were being intimidated then, as they are now, by armed thugs and have had no freedom to "disown" anybody. We realized that neither American diplomacy or any other diplomacy at that time would have any standing until it relieved itself of the stigma of having its diplomats murdered, besieged and mistreated.

Ten years later the Manchus were overthrown in a revolution which they were unable to divert into antiforeignism and we promptly recognized the "republic" which was set up and have continued to recognize it in the various forms it has taken ever since. What we have never recognized, however, until Yalta, was any one government's "preeminent" interests in any part of China. What we have never done is to "talk business" with those who have insulted and abused our diplomats.

As for our "international rights on the high seas against Chiang's cockle boats," the Declaration of Paris provided that "a blockade, to be binding, must be effective." This has become an accepted rule of international law.

The recognized government of China is attempting to make its blockade against Communist-held ports effective. It is our right to declare that the blockade is not binding, because it is not effective, but we have no right, short of a declaration of war, to resist the Nationalists' attempts to make it so. Our "abject acquiescence" is merely our recognition of our limited rights in this situation under international law.

Freedom's Odds

"ISN'T IT WONDERFUL," observed proud American No. 1, "to think of our Thanksgiving tables en masse, including all those that'll have both white and sweet potatoes and both pie and ice cream. What a country!"

"It's even more wonderful," said proud American No. 2, "to think of all the words and ideas that'll be tossed into the ether as people get together and sound off on whatever they please. What a country!"

"Come now—you know what the talk'll be about—football scores and Mrs. Barkley's wedding clothes."

"Yes, but more people than you think will be telling what ought to be done about China, Germany, prices, taxes, John L. Lewis, and the Republican Party."

"But not those who take a second piece of pie a la mode. However, I see your moral—that we ought to be thankful for our freedoms rather than for our stuffings."

"Our freedoms do have a special meaning this Thanksgiving, the world being what it is."

"Well, of course, we're lucky we're not being purged, or sent to slave camps, and that we can worship in any church—or none."

"IT'S MORE than that. The big thing we can be thankful for is the practical advantage we have for the long pull, because our science, our religion, our art, our speech and thought are free. For instance, Communist librarians in Prague have eliminated all 'unworthy literature' from public and private bookshelves. Think of the knowledge the Czechs are losing. Think how book censorship and burnings through history have set fermenting the yeast of revolution."

"But should we be thankful for a neighbor's mishaps?"

"We can be aware—with satisfaction—that dictators are as usual overreaching themselves. Don't think the purge of artists, writers, editors, in Communist countries won't have future repercussions, or that scientists, mystics, creative workers can be regimented without the lid blowing off eventually. Remember history's explosions."

"Those are such long-range things to count on."

"Well, we have something more immediate and exciting to be thankful for, and I don't mean free speech or the stupidity of dictators. It's the big exploration that's going on in laboratories, clinics, hospitals, classrooms, churches and in men's minds. It's only possible because of our freedoms. I mean the push into the world of intangibles."

"It's hard to show the average person where that's going to take him."

"NOTHING else will so affect his health and happiness. What we are doing in psychology, psychiatry, human relations, life adjustment education, religion—all these have a lot to do with our immediate tomorrows. And this is a field the totalitarian generally scorns, ridicules, even puts under a ban."

"I agree it's something to be free to develop our social sciences."

"That's not yet the biggest odds we have. We're still free enough to advance unhampered on several fronts on the greatest of all adventures—penetrating the impalpable. For example, Soviet publications have recently been assailing Prof. J. B. Rhine of Duke University and other 'reactionary philosophers,' as they call them, who are investigating extrasensory perceptions, such as mental telepathy. Yet the president of the zoological section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science recently told his organization that existing ideas of evolution may have to be altered because of evidence of the existence of telepathy. Whatever you may think about this, we Americans are at least free to pursue our search in that challenging field."

"Yes, and also to approach such things on the religious front."

"There's still another attack on the unknown that our freedoms may greatly aid if we don't lose our heads and curtail them. I mean nuclear physics. Who knows but what in further explorations of the atom another curtain may be lifted on the mystery of the universe. It's entirely possible that from a physics, a chemistry, or a psychological laboratory discoveries might come that would completely change the world's values, including its preoccupation with war. I say, we should be thankful for the freedom we've had in those fields so far."

"Yes, and thankful enough to see that we hold on to it."

Thanksgiving

We should be thankful in every way possible, not only on Thanksgiving but all of the time. We should especially be thankful that our country is at peace now rather than war and that there is no depression.

Set aside your worries, thoughts, work, play, and what have you, and say a little prayer for the many things we have to be thankful for. Our homes, loved ones, jobs, food, clothing and all the many, many things.

FAO Admits Israel But Rejects Spain

U. S. Chamber Hits Hoover Plan Delay

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States said yesterday the Administration has been dragging its heels in putting Hoover Commission Government streamlining plans into effect.

In a "progress" report on the Hoover Commission blueprint for a better executive branch, the chamber said "the only real strides toward reorganization to date have been made by Congress."

It said the Hoover Commission, headed by former President Herbert C. Hoover, had given the Nation a "multi-billion dollar opportunity" to tighten up and streamline the sprawling Federal Government.

It said much too little has been done to carry out the commission's recommendations, and urged citizens to do something about it.

"The chamber has some policies conflicting with the Hoover proposals, but it believes the commission's reports must have the active support of all citizens if a great opportunity for Government savings is not to be lost," it said.

The chamber's views were set forth in a booklet prepared by Clarence R. Miles.

It asserted that about 40 percent of the commission's original 288 recommendations needed only Administration action to put them into effect; 25 percent could have been handled by reorganization plans presented to Congress by President Truman; and the remaining 35 percent required new laws.

In a hectic meeting that lasted from 4 to 8 p. m. the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization last night voted membership to Israel, Indonesia and Korea, and slapped down an application from Spain.

Israel won its membership by a one-vote margin after five Middle Eastern nations joined by Pakistan made a bitter fight against her application. It ended a two-year effort for membership.

These were Syria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Iraq. Egypt accused Israel of refusing to cooperate with her neighboring nations in the Middle East, and declared her election to membership "would be a great disservice to the FAO."

They later were joined in their attack by James Dillon, Irish delegate, who opened the fight for admission of Spain to membership.

Dillon attacked a recommendation of the General Committee of the FAO conference calling for "no action on Spain's application at this time."

Dillon offered several amendments that were ruled not amendments, and finally succeeded in getting one across that would strike out the word "no" from the General Committee's recommendation.

In the course of debate, in which Dillon also demanded that a secret ballot be taken, a parliamentary tangle resulted that caused Chairman Oscar Gans of Cuba to ask for a ruling on the secret ballot from the floor.

Dillon attacked Gans' proposal as an "appeal to the hoi polloi, when we have a chairman we have elected and have confidence in to rule for us."

Dillon made an open appeal for support for Spain to Latin-American members—an appeal that failed. One after another, Mexico, Uruguay and others, as well as Gans speaking for Cuba, opposed him.

The United States not only opposed Dillon's effort to throw out the General Committee's resolution, but also attacked the request for a secret ballot.

Sandifer Cites Rules

Durwood U. Sandifer, deputy Assistant Secretary of State for United Nations Affairs, argued that the FAO rules did not permit a secret ballot on such an issue.

Finally Gans gave way to Dillon's requests in an open effort toward appeasement. The result of a secret ballot was a humiliating 25 to 19 defeat for Spain, with two absentees, one invalid vote and eleven nations not voting. Observers believed an open ballot would have been 2-to-1 against Spain.

In his appeal Dillon said Spain is "not only an ancient nation but the mother of many other great nations that are members here." He declared it is "not our right or duty to pass judgment on any sovereign government."

"I would not be here if I believed that was our duty," he said. His outburst came when Gans ruled that, "It is our duty to comply with the general resolution of the United Nations which states that Franco Spain can have no relations with international agencies or the U. N. until a new and acceptable government be formed in Spain."

A favorable vote from 39 of the 58 member nations, or two-thirds, is necessary for admittance to FAO. The vote for Israel, taken on secret ballot, was 40 to 7, with four abstentions and seven not voting.

Korea won by 42 to 5, with four abstentions and seven not voting. Indonesia won by 49 to 0, with two abstentions and seven not voting.

Two chiefs of delegations were seated immediately after the vote was announced, to enthusiastic applause. Israel's delegate is Ambassador Eliahu Elath, and Korea's delegate is Pyo Wook Han. The Indonesian delegate, Herman Kartowisastro, will arrive today.

The United States was told that its agriculture planning is not merely a domestic issue—that the whole world has a sake in any crop restrictions we may plan.

N. G. Abhyankar, food attache of the Indian Embassy, raised the subject after Stanley Andrews of the American Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations had discussed measures to devote more attention to livestock raising and less to row crops.

Abhyankar was supported by delegates from the Near East and other Asiatic countries, with part support from the French delegation. Their argument was that any cutback in American production of food while some sections of the world are in hunger was a matter of proper and real concern to all nations.

In reply Andrews declared that this country's vast increase in the production of cereals came as a result of the war and postwar readjustment of world production.

"We are compelled to point out that this expansion of production during war and the postwar period has been achieved through the destruction of some of our conservation practices of previous years.

"The program against soil erosion in our country has been set back by the increased planting of row crops, such as soybeans and peanuts, and by diverting several million acres of our dryland areas which had been planted to grass in the 1930s back to grain production.

Visit of Shah Gets 30 Cadets Out of 'Pokey'

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The Shah of Iran brought Thanksgiving one day early to 30 Cadets at the United States Military Academy today. His visit freed them from punishment for breach of discipline.

This means they can go to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia on Saturday.

It's an old tradition that when a chief of state pays a visit he is asked by the commanding officer if he has any special request.

The visting chief traditionally replies yes, he would like all Cadets undergoing punishment to be relieved from further penalties.

Soon after his arrival this morning, the 30-year-old ruler made his request. Maj. Gen. Bryant Moore then ordered that all Cadets confined to their rooms, relieved of privileges or making punishment tours in the biting cold weather, be freed from any further punishment at noon.

The Shah was greeted with a 21-gun salute. He was received by General Moore, reviewed a guard of honor and heard the academy band play the Iranian National Anthem.

Tomorrow he will visit the Roosevelt estate at Hyde Park.

Venezuelan Junta Restores Guarantees

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The military junta ruling Venezuela restored constitutional guarantees today and prepared to hold elections.

The junta, composed of Lieut. Col. Carlos Delgado Chalbaud, president; Lieut. Col. Luis Perez Jimenez, and Lieut. Col. Luis Llovera Paez, seized power November 24, 1948.

Today's action restored state assemblies and municipal councils.

Maryland U's Offer to the FAO . . .

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of a permanent home for the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. President H. C. Byrd presented the proposal for Gov. W. Preston Lane. Maryland would loan FAO three million dollars without interest to build the buildings, furnish the site free of charge on the campus and extend facilities of the University to the FAO staff. A choice of three sites on the campus is offered. "One, on an attractive knoll, probably is the most desirable," Byrd said.

University of Maryland Bid For FAO Site Strikes Snag

for permanent headquarters of FAO.

"President Byrd and the university exclude colored peoples from classes and facilities on the main campus at College Park. This is an un-American parallel of the Hitler master race theory.

"By court action 15 years ago, our organization won the right for colored people to attend classes at the Maryland University Law School in Baltimore. President Byrd even now is seeking to oust these students and force them to attend a separate school.

"All of the representatives from Africa, many from Asia, some from Latin American countries and even a few from Europe would be subject to the same discriminatory treatment simply because they are not a part of what President Byrd would consider the superior race.

Warns of "Repudiation"

"When choosing a site for its permanent location, the United Nations ruled out any locality in which segregation of races was a part of the local customs. Therefore acceptance of Dr. Byrd's offer would repudiate the high principles on which the United Nations is founded."

As debate on the site continued, the question of Maryland's segregation rules popped up constantly. The Haitian delegate, Rene Colimon, attacked the Maryland location in a spirited speech, and others made constant references.

Final action was passed on by Commission III to a full plenary session later this week. A French proposal for voting was adopted. This would have the commission vote as follows:

1. To decide one location in Europe—either Rome, Copenhagen or Switzerland—to be the choice if that continent is to be the site.

2. Similar action as to the proposed locations in the United States—New York, Washington or the University of Maryland.

3. The final vote will be taken to decide between the two.

Late in the day, Mexico asked that action be postponed to give it a chance to present an invitation to FAO to locate there.

Dr. Sen, Commission III chairman, remarked that action had been postponed three times.

"The matter of a decision is getting urgent," he commented. "To illustrate how urgent, I may tell you I have a petition from the wives of the FAO staff members here in Washington, asking for action so they can make plans for the future."

Lacks the Money

FCC Hoping For Probe of Big Networks

The Federal Communications Commission is planning a sweeping probe of the big radio networks next year—if Congress will provide the money. Chairman Wayne Coy has discussed this with a number of Congressmen, who, he says, have promised support. The commission's last radio survey was in 1945. That produced the hotly controversial "blue book" report severely criticizing a number of major stations.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department has started an inquiry on possible antitrust violations by the three big networks — NBC, CBS and ABC. The investigation is the result of a barrage of complaints from independent stations. Department officials say they are under "extreme" network pressure to drop the probe. To counter this, a number of independent operators are meeting shortly with a group of Congressmen to appeal for their intercession with Attorney General McGrath. Leader in this move is Representative Harry Sheppard (D., Calif.), member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

Garssons Join May in Appeal

Former Representative Andrew J. May asked District Court yesterday to reduce or suspend his impending 8-to-24-month prison term. He pleaded that he is shamed, sick, and practically penniless.

The 74-year-old Kentucky Congressman, convicted of a war-contract bribery conspiracy, protested his innocence and said a prison term might well kill him.

The two men convicted with him, Murray and Henry Garsson, were given similar sentences. They also asked the court for a reduction of sentence or probation. All have been free under bond since the 1947 trial.

The clemency petitions will be considered by Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, who imposed the sentences.

May, wartime chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, was convicted of accepting $53,734 in bribes from the Garsson brothers who headed a munitions empire which held 78 million dollars in Government contracts.

May said that he made nothing out of the transactions and has spent his savings and borrowed heavily as a result of the prosecution.

He said that he has a serious heart ailment, and impaired eyesight and hearing. A nephew, May said, will care for him if probation is granted.

The Garssons both claimed that their "patriotic" work on behalf of the Government was of great aid during the war and that imprisonment could now serve no real purpose.

Westinghouse Denies Charge Of Bid-Rigging

The Westinghouse Electric Corp. yesterday denied charges that Army specifications for $100,000 worth of water coolers were tailored to fit Westinghouse models.

The allegations were made Tuesday by Orville Morrison, president of the Sunroc Refrigeration Co., Philadelphia, before a House Judiciary Subcommittee investigating monopoly trends.

Morrison said he submitted a lower bid than Westinghouse on a contract for electric water coolers recently ordered by the Chicago office of the Army Quartermaster Corps. But he claimed specifications for the coolers were rigged by "wording Westinghouse sales literature into Federal specifications."

E. V. Huggins, Westinghouse secretary, yesterday insisted his concern had nothing whatsoever to do with drawing up the Army specifications.

"The fact that the specifications are not tailored to Westinghouse equipment is shown by the fact that at least 10 manufacturers are able to submit bids in response to invitations," he said in a letter to Subcommittee Chairman Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.).

The hearings are in recess until Friday, when Brig. Gen. Ernest M. Brannon, assistant Army judge advocate general for procurement, will testify.

Celler has "invited" Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, Army quartermaster general who was suspended but reinstated during the Senate "five percenter" investigation, to appear at his convenience and discuss the cooler contract.

Army officials said the judge advocate's office informed Morrison last Thursday that the Westinghouse contract award was "properly made." They said 10 other "responsible" manufacturers had found no fault with the specifications and had entered bids.

Nevertheless, Celler said he plans to send official transcripts of Morrison's complaint to the Federal Trade Commission and Justice Department antitrust division "for such action as they may see fit to take."

Morrison claimed there is a "general pattern" for division of armed services buying of water coolers between Westinghouse and the General Electric Co.

Murder Case Dropped After Sanity Report

The Government yesterday dismissed a 10-year-old murder charge against Richard J. Colton, 69, a former who formerly resided at 3579 13th st. nw.

Colton has been in St. Elizabeths Hospital since 1940 after he was adjudged insane before trial on the murder count. Psychiatrists recently declared he had recovered his sanity.

In requesting the dismissal, Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray told District Court that all available evidence showed Colton was insane at the time of the crime. Colton was then considered deranged as the result of alcholoism and other factors.

He was charged with the shotgun slaying of Joseph B. McKenna, 42, of 3547 13th st. nw. At the time, Colton told police that he believed McKenna, a relative by marriage, had tried to poison him. There was no foundation for this belief, Murray said.

Fix Tax Rates in Prosperity To Balance Budget, CED Urges

terday, representing the CIO, took much the same position.

A statement of Emil Rieve, chairman of the CIO's full employment committee, deplored insistence on an annually balanced budget.

Rieves' statement said:

"When times are good and full employment and high levels of national income prevail, every effort should be made to pile up Federal surpluses and pay off part of the debt.

"When unemployment rises, however, and national income drops, the Federal Government must use its fiscal powers to help stabilize the economy, including, if necessary, spending for programs which may result in budget deficits for a while."

The CED's statement was made by J. Cameron Thomson, president of the Northwest Bancorporation, in his capacity of chairman of the CED's Monetary and Fiscal Policy group. With him was Beardsley Ruml, New York business executive and economist, and author of the pay-as-you-go tax plan. He is vice chairman of the CED monetary and fiscal policy subcommittee.

In the course of his testimony, Ruml went on a side track to urge outright and immediate abolition of the wartime "punitive" excise taxes. These apply to such items as furs, jewelry, cosmetics, transportation fares, and entertainment tickets.

Ruml, emphasizing that he was speaking for himself and not for CED, argued that the taxes were unjust and had no place in the peacetime economy.

They were imposed during the war, he pointed out, not merely for revenue but to accomplish certain savings of materials and services and thus further the war effort.

The total revenue they yield, he said, was somewhere between $1.7 and $2.5 billion gross. But the net loss to the Government, if the taxes were repealed, would be much less, he argued.

For, he said, the increased business in the lines affected, and the decreased outlay for unemployment compensation to workers rendered idle by the repressive effect of the excise taxes, would offset a good part of the tax loss. There would be increased yields in other tax channels, such as business profits and personal income taxes, he said.

His view was the most forthright on the subject of repealing excise taxes which has so far been uttered by an acknowledged expert in the tax field. The CED itself will announce its views on the matter next January, but it is not known whether they will accord with Ruml's.

So far, CED tax policy has held that alternative forms of revenue must be found before other taxes, however objectionable, are repealed. Ruml would repeal the excise taxes first, on grounds of their overriding inequity, and look around later for compensatory tax-producing measures.

The CED'S slant on money, debt and budget policy, as spelled out yesterday, called for a combined operation in which the Federal Reserve Board's powers in open market operations and setting of rediscount rates would be called into play to provide the necessary flexibility.

Fixed Policy for Stabilization

In the meantime, the CED said, a fixed tax and budget policy would give the necessary stabilization and would act almost automatically to counter fluctuations too far away from the norm.

In trends pointing toward mild inflation, the excess of tax receipts over Federal spending would have a compensating deflationary effect. In times when the trend was downward, tax collections would fall and payments for unemployment compensation would rise, both of which factors would have a stimulating effect.

Furthermore, Thomson argued, the policy recommended by the CED would encourage Federal economy. For any major increase in Federal spending, above limits already determined, would necessitate an increase in tax rates. The Administration, accordingly, would think twice before upping its rate of outlays.

All Cosmic Ray Containers Recovered

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Sixteen scientists stepped off the Aircraft Carrier Palau here today to report "good hunting" in tropical seas and the air above.

They reported a perfect score in bagging all of 12 containers of scientific equipment sent aloft in helium-filled balloons to record cosmic-ray activity 18 miles above the earth.

The carrier, her escorting destroyer, the Fraser, and a helicopter aided in the retrieving—in some cases in chases up to 200 miles long.

Dr. M. H. Shamos, assistant professor of physics at New York University, one of the expedition members, said the "bag" should yield important new data on nuclear energy, but that analysis of the information obtained may require a year.

The scientists, participating in "Operation Skyhook," spent the days of November 10 to 19 off Guantanamo, Jamaica and Haiti. They sent up 12 balloons to 97,000 feet, where the loads of scientific equipment were automatically released and dropped by parachute. Then, all the scientists had to do was find the hermetically sealed containers afloat in the seas.

Last March, with similar scientific intent, two Aerobee rockets were launched from aboard the U. S. S. Norton Sound to telemeter back to shipboard just what the cosmic rays are doing 65 miles up. That expedition was off the west coast of South America.

Thanks to you . . .
To you—whoever you are, who have contributed your small or great effort in making America the kind of country it has become!
Thanks to the Pilgrim Fathers, to the pioneers who opened the West, to the Presidents who graced the White House with wise leadership—and to the millions of people—farmers, weavers, miners—workers of all kinds who are an integral, vital factor in building the America we know and love.
We are thankful for the men and women in our own tiny circle of business life who have permitted us to serve them so that we could enjoy life in our country and especially in our beloved Washington.
Our sincerest thanks to all of you.

D. C. Deposits Up 26 Million In Two Weeks

By S. Oliver Goodman

Demand deposits of Washington banks took another sharp rise in the week ended November 16.

The total for 17 Reserve members soared to $754,080,000, a gain of $17,157,000 for the week on top of the previous week's upturn of $9,324,000. The two-week rise aggregated more than 26 million dollars.

Time deposits, as usual, showed little change. The totals as of November 16 stood at $176,276,000, as compared with $176,302,000 in the previous week.

Of the 26-million-dollar upturn for the two weeks, 16 million dollars was accounted for by deposits of individuals, partnerships and corporations. Inter-bank deposits accounted for about 4½ million dollars and Government deposits rose 1½ million.

Total loans of local banks continue upward, amounting to $239,259,000 on November 16 against $238,139,000 on November 9. Real estate loans on the latest date aggregated $81,123,000, slightly lower than $81,442,000 a week earlier.

YULE CHECKS: The Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. announced yesterday that it will disburse on Monday $375,000 to more than 7000 Christmas Club members. President T. Howard Duckett said that the twenty-sixth annual club for 1950 is now open for registrations.

BOON: Devaluation of the British pound has proved a boon to a Washington tailoring firm which also operates shops and a woolen mill in England. Louis Brown of Louis & Dan Brown, Ltd., 812-14 14th st. nw., said yesterday that American orders for fabrics had swamped the firm's subsidiary in recent weeks. The Sunderland & Hainsworth mill in Yorkshire, he said, has enough orders on hand at present to work at capacity for the next 16 months. Brown recently returned from a three months' visit to England and said general conditions there are much improved over a year ago. Essential foods are in liberal supply, he said, except for meat which is still rationed.

NOURSE TO TALK: Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, who served until recently as chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, will be guest speaker at the annual dinner of the New York Security Dealers Association o December 9 in New York City. The talk will be of definite interest to all concerned with economic policies of this country, the announcement said.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, has been elected a director of Merck & Co., Inc., manufacturing chemists . . . Ralph Smiley, manager of the Washington office of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, yesterday addressed students of The American University's business and industrial management program . . . Morris W. Kellogg has been elected board chairman of Pullman, Inc., and Champ Carry as president and chief executive officer . . . George F. Swartz has been appointed assistant to the president of Textron, Inc., in charge of advertising and promotion . . . Walter F. Good jr., has been appointed assistant treasurer of Washington Institute of Technology.

DIVIDENDS: State Loan & Finance Corp. of Washington declared regular quarterly dividends of 25 cents a share on Class A and B stocks, 37½ cents on 6 percent cumulative preferred and 37½ cents on 6 percent convertible preferred. President Davis Weir said the total disbursement on the Class A and B stocks this year will be $1 a share, against 72½ cents a share in 1948. All dividends are payable December 15 to stock of record December 1.

COMMENT: The Fitch Survey currently points out that common stock of Julius Garfinckel & Co. at market price of 17 to 18 yields better than 8 percent and adds: "Sales volume and growth prospects of the company are satisfactory, and the common stock has substantial attraction at prevailing levels for liberal yield and appreciation." Latest earnings report for the fiscal year ended July 31 showed net equal to $2.50 a common share.

TIP TO THRIFTY: Buy gasoline in the morning and you'll get more for your money, according to Automobile Facts, publication of the Automobile Manufacturers Association. "Since gasoline expands as the temperature rises," said an item in the publication, "a gallon has less actual fuel in hot weather. This means that you get more gasoline per gallon in winter than in summer, and you even make a real saving if you buy gasoline in the morning rather than after noon."

ODD LOTS: The D. C. Life Insurance Trust Council heard "That Old Devil-Procrastination" roasted by Merrill Anderson at a meeting Tuesday night in the Mayflower . . . The Hormel Packing Co. paid employes the equivalent of 1.028 times their weekly earnings under its profit-sharing plan. The year-end payment a year ago was 7.452 a man's weekly pay check . . . Auto output this week is estimated at 73,773 cars and trucks, compared with 94,347 last week. Production is expected to show further declines the rest of the year due to steel shortages.

No Probe Due By Vinson On Denfeld

The reasons for removal of Admiral Louis E. Denfeld as Chief of Naval Operations will not be probed by the House Armed Services Committee. Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) so told newsmen yesterday.

Denfeld's removal followed the committee's recent investigation of national defense policies which brought into sharp focus differences of opinion among Navy, Army and Air Force leaders. The admiral, a "star" witness, criticized defense policies. His removal was requested by Secretary of the Navy Matthews.

As far as he is concerned, Vinson said, there will be no more hearings in the armed services squabble despite requests

Superb New Orchestral Work Heard

By Paul Hume

A brilliant new orchestral work was heard on last night's program of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Howard Mitchell led his players in Norman Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale. This work by a rising New Yorker won last season's New York Critics' Circle Award as the outstanding new composition heard in 1948.

It fully deserves such high praise. Based on a relatively late Gregorian chant, the Kyrie from the Mass of the Angels, it demonstrates high talent in its composer. The variations are the most beautiful section of the work tonally. The orchestra produces a rich and often new tone. Dello Joio's degree of inventiveness is unusual as he rings changes on the eloquent theme.

His Chaconne starts handsomely, with dark scoring, and clusters of chromatic figures. Later developments of the Chaconne seem a bit vagrant at first but we would prefer to study the score before insisting on the point.

The finale is a handsome piece of jazzy syncopation, with the once solemn theme coming out in thumping style. It is a fine piece. The orchestra negotiated it forcefully, with proper polish in a triumphant reading.

Mitchell's soloist was his concertmaster, Jan Tomasow. A Bach concerto in A Minor, and the Chausson Poeme gave Tomasow double opportunity to show his talents. The Chausson came off better. Here, the violin tone, notably in the higher register, was sweet and clear.

It is more impassioned than Tomasow feels it. Intricacies at times were blurred. This was true chiefly in the first double stops with orchestra. The Bach concerto was a great pleasure.

Tomasow could not always achieve precise intonation, a serious drawback in the string writings of Bach. The orchestra provided handsome accompaniments in both solo works. Mr. Shulman, filling the concertmaster assignment for the evening, did well in several solos.

An exciting account of the Sorcerer's Apprentice returned this gem to the regular concert series. The evening closed with a rapturous version of Rovel's second Daphnis and Chloe suite.

Save for some unprecise pizzicato playing in the violins, the whole suite moved with both grace and virility. It was a fine reading of the unique score.

Next week: Leonard Warren in opera arias and Italian songs.

Hayes Appointed To Pryor's Post as FSA Assistant

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, yesterday announced his selection of Theodore T. Hayes as his new assistant administrator.

Hayes, who has served as a consultant to Ewing for the past several months, succeeds Donald J. Pryor, who recently joined the staff of the International Refugee Organization, Geneva, Switzerland.

The new assistant will serve as liaison man between FSA and Congress. During World War II, he was director and executive vice president of Auto Ordnance Corp., Thompson Machine Gun Corp., and Maguire Industries, Inc., respectively, manufacturers of arms and electronics.

Citizens' Unit Approves Sesquicentennial Plans

The 16th Street Highlands Citizens Association last night voted its "complete cooperation" for next summer's Sesquicentennial celebration after hearing a talk by L. B. Slater, of the commission staff, explaining plans for the development of a Sesquitheater in the area west of 16th st. in Rock Creek Park.

Capt. Harry M. Dengler, association president, also reviewed legislation in back of the project, at the meeting which was held in the Brightwood School, Nicholson between 13th and 14th sts. nw.

PUC Refuses To Reconsider Hike in Gas Rate

Request of Washington Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers for reconsideration of the recent 6.14 percent gas rate increase was denied yesterday by the District Public Utilities Commission.

Filed November 16, the day the Washington Gas Light Co. increase became effective, the request sought either outright denial of the increase or further hearings.

It complained that testimony of two witnesses speaking against the increase had not been considered by the PUC.

In its order yesterday, the PUC repeated its statement that the exhibits presented by one witness, George H. Harbaugh, contained so many errors his testimony was of no value. Testimony of the other witness, George C. Webster, a gas appliance dealer, had no bearing on the reasonableness of gas rates, the PUC said.

THIS YEAR

we have so much to thank you for . . .

THROUGHOUT this great country, people are taking time out from their labors to express thanks through prayer and thanksgiving.

And along with these personal expressions of gratitude, we would like to add a special message of thanks to all our friends, both old and new.

THANKS to all of you who have bought new Chevrolet cars and trucks from us. We appreciate your choice, and know you will find true driving enjoyment in the extra-value Chevrolet offers. THANKS to those of you who have placed orders and are waiting delivery. Your patience and your loyalty to the Chevrolet standard will find a sure reward in the complete satisfaction your new Chevrolet will bring you. THANKS to our many service customers, for the confidence you have shown in our service methods. We are proud of the fact that you like the way we take care of your car. We are happy that you keep coming back to us when it needs attention, because we want your car to give you perfect satisfaction.

THANKS to everyone who has made this one of the greatest years in Chevrolet history . . . in new car sales, in new truck sales, in service. Your preference has proved again that Chevrolet is the car America likes best, and we thank you for it.

Absorbing Study Of Race Problem

By Richard L. Coe

AN ABSORBING, finely produced film faces a problem of the American Negro in the new arrival at the Palace, "Pinky."

While it seems a trend is with us this year, since "Home of the Brave" and "Lost Boundaries" have also tackled aspects of the matter, "Pinky" is a distinguished picture on the entertainment level deemed most popular with the movie masses.

Darryl F. Zanuck has employed Dudley Nichols and Philip Dunne to adapt the Cid Ricketts Sumner novel and Elia Kazan to direct it, exceptionally able men all. The cast includes such able players as Ethel Barrymore, Ethel Waters, Basil Ruysdael and Evelyn Varden, as well as a surprisingly effective performance from the youthful Jeanne Crain.

The story concerns the granddaughter of a Negro laundress who has studied nursing up North and gone back to her grandmothers shack for what she plans as only a brief visit.

The girl's skin and features have few Negroid characteristics and in the North she has passed as a white girl, working her way through nursing school and falling in love with a young white doctor.

In the small Southern settlement she suffers the indignities custom has heaped on her race, and the happiness of the Northern living as a white makes them even more bitter to bear. She prepares to go back to her lover, but a land-poor patrician lady who befriended her grandmother falls ill and needs a nurse.

So the girl stays on, breaking through the whims of the aged spinster and gradually gaining the respect of the dying woman. After her death, it is discovered that the patrician has left the Negro nurse her home and grounds.

A Particular Situation

This raises the worst prejudices of the town, but the judge decides that the will is perfectly legal and that the property belongs to the girl. Reluctantly, she insists her white lover leave her to work out a reason for the daring bequest and the final scene shows her ministering to her own race in the sheltered shell of the Old South.

From this outline it is evident that "Pinky" is dealing with a particular, highly individual aspect of our national conscience. Pinky is clearly drawn as a young woman of trained skill, accomplishment and beauty. Her benefactress, while alive, represents perhaps the most pilloried of Southern gentility, in death proves to be a strong woman of courageous wisdom. That these two are the focal points of the plot is exceptional, but at the same time it is also dramatic and, even, far-sighted.

It is not a happy predicament, but the ending, in which the girl renounces the easily romantic notion of marriage and "passing," is more honest than the conclusion of "Lost Boundaries." We are left with her loneliness, but also with the sad wisdom that man's ability to conduct his society is a lengthy, patient struggle.

Splendidly Pictured

Thanks to Kazan's direction, each scene has stirring interest of its own and all the playing is first rate. Miss Crain acts the heroine with contagious understanding and for the first time in years Miss Barrymore has a role of more than dowager stature.

Ethel Waters is immensely fine as the grandmother, and Basil Ruysdael's judge, Griff Barnett's doctor and Evelyn Varden's bitterly observed Southern lady are all expertly drawn.

Finally, it is good to note that neither race is pictured as either all virtuous or all evil. The conniving Jake Walters is as wicked a Negro as Judge Walker is a courageous white man. This observation is an immensely healthy one for a picture about the brotherhood of man. It makes clear that the problem is neither simple nor insoluble.

"PINKY." Twentieth Century-Fox release produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Screen play by Philip Dunne and Dudley Nichols from a novel by Cid Ricketts Sumner. Photographed by Joe McDonald. Music by Alfred Newman. Directed by Elia Kazan. At the Palace.

Mary Garden Hits Lack of Opera in D. C.

Mary Garden, famous opera star of the past, said yesterday that the people of Washington should be "ashamed of yourselves" for not having an opera house here.

"Every capital in Europe has an opera house and here the capital of the greatest country in the world does not," she said.

She said that President Truman has "the most beautiful eyes I've ever looked into."

"They look so young and vigorous," she said, "but I would hate to have them mad at me."

Miss Garden, 72-year-old native of Scotland who is here on a lecture tour, visited the White House and said she found Mr. Truman "a most wonderful person."

She said he was "very interested in the arts," and "thinks music is marvelous."

But she thought a fifth point—the arts—should be added after the famous point four of the President's inaugural address.

"In this country," she said, "you do everything for science and so little for the arts."

At Keith's

Claudette's in a New Comedy And So Are Brent and Young

IT'S JUST old times at Keith's this week. Claudette Colbert, showing the left profile only, is in another situation comedy, this tmie with the undiluted assistance of Robert Young, George Brent and Max Baer.

The comedy is by no means another "It Happened One Night," but maybe we're all a little unkind to kee pbringing that up about Claudette. Anyway, Keith's is probably as good a place as any to go on a Thanksgiving afternoon to get away from the television (I know some people who have to work, for that matter).

He Hired a Major

The stor yis of how a man, George Brent, hires a Major Shelley to run his office. The major, it follows, turns out to be Miss Colbert. Brent and Robert Young, for reasons too involved to discuss here, undertake to frame Miss C. into sticking close to her little grindstone at Brent's office. She catches on, frames them very tidily in return and catches the right man, or the wrong one, depending on how you feel about these two dandies.

Baer, the former heavyweight champion, plays a wrestler in the film and becomes involved in it at roughly the point where it reaches a rather sad peak in a fish market. I've always thought that if people like John Payne could get good jobs in the movies, so could Max Baer. He does a much better job in this than Payne ever could have, a statement which obviously won't stand much scrutiny.

Same Claudette

Claudette's just as I've always seen her. I spent a large portion of the time yesterday trying to get around on her right side (she never shows that side, in case all this is going past you) and never succeeding. I bet it's every bit as symmetrical as her left side and I think it's time Claudette forgot this nonsense. Brent also is about the same, only plumper. He talks without opening his mouth and you got to admit it's a good trick. Young is smooth and affable, entirely satisfactory. Somebody unnamed played a very neat bit in a jeyelry store. I hope he gets a raise.

There's a travelogue about Mexico and another about Australia.

Neither is very exciting, but both are in black and white and I suppose that's something. The football pictures are excellent.

Falls Church High Pupil Places 3d In State Contest

Seventeen-year-old Rashid Abdu, a sophomore at Falls Church High School, has placed third in the State-wide "I Speak for Democracy" contest." He lives in McLean, Va.

The contest is sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with State radio stations and retail radio dealers.

First-place winner in the contest was 16-year-old Thomas J. Brockwell of Portsmouth, Va. Second place went to Nancy Lee Boxley, 16, of Richmond. Among honorable mention winners was Catherine Casey, 16, of Alexandria.

Group to Test Theory Of Retreating Polar Ice

London, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—A Norwegian-British-Swedish expedition sailed today for the Antarctic to find out if the world is getting warmer.

Scientists of the three nations sailed for the Norwegian Antarctic dependency of Queen Maud Land with provisions for a two-year stay and tons of scientific equipment.

The British Royal Geographical Society, one of the sponsors, said Queen Maud Land was expected to provide a testing ground for theories the south polar ice is retreating—which would mean higher temperatures the world over.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ITS OCCUPANTS MAY BE THANKFUL—An auto bearing Illinois license plates is pulled from four feet of water at the ferry slip at Newport News, Va., after crashing through the guard rail yesterday. Two men riding in it escaped death. They are identified as Richard H. Byers, 27, of the Hay-Adams Hotel in Washington and Joseph J. Perkowitz, 26, of Evanston, Ill.

D. C. Woman Wins $1055 Song Prize

Mrs. Warden H. Pike, wife of a Government Printing Office elevator operator, today really has something to be thankful about.

She identified the song—"By Heck"—on the WWDC mystery melody program yesterday and won $1055. The Pikes live at 841 19th st. ne.

The tune has been played five days a week since December 14, 1948. No one had been able to identify it until Mrs. Pike recognized it as a tune on an old record of hers. The kitty had gone up five dollars a day since the start of the program.

Driver Starts Term In Miss Mitchell's Death

Atlanta, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Hugh Gravitt, the taxi driver convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the death of Novelist Margaret Mitchell, began serving a one year to 18 months prison sentence today.

Elopers Wed After Accusing Jeweler Proves 'Best' Man

Orangeburg, S. C., Nov. 23 (Spl.). A 'teen-age eloping couple finally said their "I do's" here last night and looked forward to a happy Thanksgiving Day—thanks to an understanding local jeweler.

The couple, who left Washington last weekend, had been charged with stealing a wedding and an engagement ring from Lever Metts' Jewelry store.

The way was cleared for the young couple's marriage yesterday when Metts dropped charges against them, saying "they were only trying to follow a decent tradition."

The newly-weds are Barbara Jean Betts, 17, of Route 2, Silver Spring, Md., and Herbert Burnside Lowey, 18 of 4934 Eskridge tr., nw., Washington D. C.

The youthful bridegroom told police he took the rings from a display window Monday because he wanted to do the wedding up right. The rings were valued at $185 and the youngsters were released in custody of their parents who came here to attend the wedding.

Following their tiff with the law, Metts helped the couple make arrangements for a marriage ceremony in the First Baptist Church here and was the only wedding guest outside the family. He later entertained the bridal party in his new home.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Lowey. The father works at the Bureau of Standards.

Maryland Hopes to Feast on West Virginia Today

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

Terp Bowl Dreams Hinge on Outcome

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland ends its home football season today, an almost prohibitive favorite to gobble up West Virginia in the area's only Thanksgiving Day gridiron feast.

Regardless of how high "up" the Mountaineers may be for the 2:15 College Park affair, the high-riding Terrapins are expected to bring them down by at least the three-touchdown margin they're doped to do it by.

It's the end of a long, unsuccessful season for Ex-Redskin Coach Dud DeGroot's visitors. They've won only four out of ten, their best showings being against Virginia and Pittsburgh. The Cavaliers outscrambled them, 19-14, while Pitt came from behind to whip up a 20-7 decision.

But the Mountaineers have a habit of rising to the heights against Maryland, a fact that is disturbing Terp Coach Jim Tatum no little. Although underdogs in all five of the previous clashes, the Mounties have lost only one, two years ago, the first season of the Tatum regime.

Today's contest, incidentally, has a striking parallel to that 27-0 Maryland triumph, scored at College Park. The Terps went on from there to the Gator Bowl, a destination they may reach again this season if they are successful this afternoon and again next Friday evening in Miami.

But bowl talk was the farthest thing from Tatum's mind as he prepared his charges to follow up their 14-13 conquest of previously unbeaten Boston University with a win over the men from Morgantown.

"We have not been invited anywhere," he stressed at a final blackboard drill yesterday. "We have two games left, tomorrow and next week. The bowl situation will take care of itself."

Pep Talks Enough

Never at a loss for words, Tatum admittedly has been stumped trying to rally his forces for today's brush. He must convince them that the Mountaineers are better than their weak record indicates.

"This is their last game, they've got nothing to lose and they're going to shoot the works against you," he told his squad. "Nothing but your best effort will stop them."

On the other hand, the lantern-jawed DeGroot, who rehearsed his squad at College Park yesterday, reiterated his respect for Maryland:

"Our scouts report they're the best team on our schedule, Pittsburgh and Virginia included," he said.

Against the Nation's third best defensive club, that's Maryland, the West Virginians will undoubtedly take to the air. At least their final practice session yesterday indicated.

DeGroot had Quarterback-passer Jimmy Walthall throwing long and short passes most of the chilly hour with Ends Clarence Cox and Bernie Huntz and Halfback Bill Wiltrout on the receiving end.

For line-crashing duties, the Mounties give the ball to Fullback Walt Malyk, a 250-pounder who's faster than his bulk indicates. It's a T-formation club with the same innovations, albeit not as successful, as the West Virginia team which smeared Maryland, 16-14, last year.

The usual offensive cast will operate for the Terps in their last home stand. Halfback Mighty Mo Modzelewski, who's averaged 5.4 per try in 84 carries, Halfback Lynn Davis and Fullback Earl Roth will do the ball totin'. Quarterbacks Stan Lavine and Joe Tucker will alternate the air game.

IN SHORT—It's the last College Park appearance for eight Old Liners: End and Capt. Fred Davis, Center Jim Brasher, and Backs Vern Seibert, Jimmy LaRue, Bob Roulette, Earl Roth, Lavine, and Tucker . . . Albie Booth, half-pint halfback star for Eli Yale in the early thirties, will referee . . . Fred Stuvek, 240-pound West Virginia tackle, injured his back last week and will not play. Missing from the Maryland squad will be third-string fullback Karney Sciosia. Otherwise both squads are in top shape . . .

Knicks Again Wallop Caps, Take Over 2d

Special to The Washington Post

New York, Nov. 23.—New York handed the Washington Caps a second successive decisive setback, 87-67, and took over second place in the NBA's Eastern Division here tonight.

Tuesday in Washington the Knicks triumphed by 15 points, 89-74, and took up just where they left off.

New York pulled away to a comfortable 42-31 halftime lead and used subs freely throughout the second half. Again Carl Braun was high scorer with 17 points, two off his production Tuesday.

Dads Join In Wilson, Tech Rivalry

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Instead of merely saying "my team can lick yours," the McKinley Tech and Woodrow Wilson students yesterday were shouting in effect, "my dad can lick yours."

They weren't trying to incite their elders to violence. They were simply bragging about their folks, who are going all out to make Friday night's Tech-Wilson Interhigh football championship game at Griffith Stadium a whopping big success.

The other day, Theodore Wege, whose son John is a Tech halfback, bought 14 tickets to the title game.

Then yesterday, along came Garry Quinn, sr., who purchased 20. Garry Quinn, jr., is a halfback at Wilson.

Garry, sr., is taking his wife, their daughters, Jacquelyn, 15, Dorothy Anne, 8, and Linda, 6, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Miles, Louis Chipouras, and any other of his relatives who happen to drop by his house.

Max Bassin, downtown restaurateur, whose nephew, Arnie Tranen, is Coolidge High's star tailback, picked up a supply of 15 ducats at The Washington Post lobby.

At Bell Vocational High, where twice as many tickets have been sold as there are students, Bill Dismer, former newspaperman, and now a 14th st. merchant, bought 20 tickets.

The high school classic is sponsored by The Washington Post and Board of Education, with the Almas Temple Shriners contributing the pregame and halftime entertainment and the championship trophy. Proceeds go to buy new athletic equipment for the 10 Interhigh schools.

McKinley Tech and Wilson yesterday sold out of student tickets and each had to send out a rush order for 400 extras. Altogether, the two schools have sold about 3500 student tickets.

Tech's adult ticket sale also neared the 1000 mark approximately the same as Wilson.

Douglas, Brundige Give All-Vocally

Steve Douglas of WRC and Bill Brundige of WINX will contribute their time to handle the public address chores at tomorrow nights Interhigh football championship game between McKinley Tech and Woodrow Wilson at Griffith Stadium.

Hardy L. Pearce, head of Interhigh Athletics, last night announced the officials for the title classic. They are: Referee Red Sweeney, Umpire Al Doran, Head Linesman Frank Barger, and Field Judge John Roper.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ONE YEAR AGO, Woodrow Wilson High School's coach was taking a dim and disgusted view of his football team, culled from the fashionable country club sector of the city. To their faces, Joe Carlo called them "the most lackadaisical bunch of sissies ever on a team of mine."

Their doting mothers didn't like it, and wrote to the papers, but Coach Carlo didn't retract. That was last year, however. This week he has a different feeling about it. With most of the same lads who finished with only one victory in 1948, Carlo developed a team of far sterner stuff and tomorrow night it's playing Tech for the public high school title at Griffith Stadium.

POVICH

Those Wilson kids whom Carlo once said "had no stomach for making the hard tackles," have rebounded pretty well. They've won seven in a row, lost only a single game in the school league all season, and are no worse than an even choice to beat Tech for their first scholastic title.

At any rate, the game ought to be a beaut. Tech, beaten only twice in the school league, takes a five-game winning streak of its own into the championship contest at the ball park.

IT'S A COINCIDENCE, or maybe it isn't, that the only two school coaches who haven't succumbed to the T-formation, Carlo and Tech's Ed Solomon, are in the title game. They are both disciples of the single-wing, and the suspicion always has been that the T-formation is entirely too intricate for school kids, who lack the savvy to make the T go better than the direct-pass formations.

Carlo is exhorting his Wilson squad to its best defensive demonstration of the year, and small wonder. In Tech, they'll meet up with the highest-powered team of the school league, one that has averaged nearly five touchdowns per game with Fullback Ray Fox the most unstoppable ball-carrier in the series.

Fox has been virtually a one-man backfield for Tech, with some help from Benny Colandreo. Coach Solomon whipped up that pair of ball-carriers from among his surplus ends at the start of the year. Graduation took all of Tech's backs except Perry Dellastatious and that young man was the tragic victim of an auto smashup before the season started. But from among his bevy of ends, Solomon found ball-carriers in Fox and Colandreo. Fox has averaged two touchdowns per game.

IN HIS FOUR SEASONS as Tech coach, Solomon has done very well. This is the third time he's had a team in the title play-off. Glenn Smith and Jim McAuley, a pair of his graduates, are now regular ends for Clemson. Clarence Drayer is playing tackle for GWU. Solomon has never had to call his lads from the Northeast section of the city any names to fire them up. Natively, they hit hard, perhaps.

The lone blot on Wilson's record in the school league was that 6-0 defeat by Coolidge High early in the season before Carlo had his boys squared away. A bit later, Coolidge took a 26-0 beating from Tech, but that's no direct clew to any disparity between Tech and Wilson. Because the Eastern team that tied Tech in the series later took a 34-13 beating from Wilson.

Against Tech's Fox, Wilson has its own counter-offering of Fullback Leo Speros, 195-pound ball-carrying threat who has attracted the notice of eager college talent scouts. The Fox-Speros duel for individual honors will probably be reflected in the final score. It's an extra flip for the game-goer, thousands of whom already rate high school football as the finest spectator sport anyway.

AT WILSON, Carlo has had no complaint at all with the spirit this season. Lee Brinson, his fullback, lives in Arlington but has prevailed on his parents to pay the tuition fees of District schools, so that he can play with his chums on the Wilson team. Chuck Mullins, now a reserve guard, couldn't make the squad last season, so he carried the water bucket until he grew up to 135 pounds in his senior year.

The whole business of Wilson vs. Tech is a refreshing departure from former seasons when the high school championship used to be decided in the comparative privacy of a school stadium where 5000 was a big crowd. For the third season, The Washington Post is sponsoring the title game, and it will be the big league setting of Griffith Stadium with 20,000 expected in the stands.

It's been an awakening of interest in high school football hereabouts, with the play-off game now the season-long objective of the schools, their student bodies and their coaches. And it's to good purpose, too, because the entire proceeds go into the school athletic funds, the step-child of the Board of Education. Next year, maybe, there'll be enough helmets to go around for the kids who want to take a lick at playing high school football.

Whooping It Up From Sidelines

Penn, Cornell In Top Game

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—A number of traditional Thanksgiving Day battles usher in the week's college football schedule tomorrow, and then on Saturday the final full salvo of the '49 season will echo across the Nation's playing fields.

Penn and Cornell meet at Philadelphia in the most important of the Thanksgiving fixtures. The Quakers, undefeated within the Ivy League, can win the title either with a victory or a tie, but Cornell's slick offense has captured much support and the result is regarded as a toss-up.

Texas engages the Texas Aggies at College Station in another turkey day rivalry which used to be the biggest thing in the Southwest. But this time they will knock each other around strictly for their own pleasure while the fans impatiently await Saturday's collision at Houston between Rice and Baylor for the Southwest Conference crown and an automatic appearance in the Cotton Bowl.

Indianapolis Bows To Stags, 92-72

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Chicago Stags led all the way to defeat the Indianapolis Olympians 92 to 72 in a NBA game tonight in Chicago Stadium before 8691.

The Stags' tight guarding held Alex Groza, Olympian center and former Kentucky star, to two field goals and seven free tosses.

By the United Press

Unbeaten Notre Dame placed three players on the United Press' all-America first team, announced yesterday.

Leon Hart, 245-pound Irish end and cocaptain, led all voters, being named the left end on all except four of the 313 teams picked. Other Notre Dame selections were Quarterback Bob Williams and Fullback Emil Sitko.

Minnesota landed two on the first team—Tackle Leo Nomellini and Center Clayton Tonnenmaker.

In addition to Williams and Sitko, the others selected by reporters and broadcasters on the first team backfield are Doak Walker of S. M. U. and Arnold Galiffa of Army.

The only area player on the team was End Art Weiner of North Carolina. Tackle Ray Krouse of Maryland polled the sixth highest number of votes among the tackles.

Area players accorded honorable mention:

Ends—Vito Ragazzo, W. and M.; Ken Powell, North Carolina; Bill Earon, Duke; Carlton Elliott, Virginia; Bob Duncan, Wake Forest; Bob Noppinger, Georgetown; Bob Weir, Virginia.

Tackles—Ray Krouse, Maryland; Lou Creekmur, W. and M.; Louis Allen, Duke; Dyke Johnson, Virginia; Hank Costa, N. C. State; Bill George, Wake Forest; Paul Tereault, Navy.

Guards—Dick Dudeck, North Carolina; Bob Ward, Maryland; Bob Musser, N. C. State; Rudy Gayzur, Maryland.

Center—Irv Holdash, North Carolina.

Backs—Johnny Papit, Virginia; Jack Cloud, W. and M.; Bob Zastrow, Navy; Buddy Lex, W. and M.; Bill Gregus, Wake Forest; Bill Cox, Duke; Dick Michels, Virginia; Bo Hagan, South Carolina; Ed Modzelewski, Maryland; Dick Bunting, North Carolina.

Howard Plays Today at Lincoln

Howard University and Lincoln resume the oldest rivalry in Negro collegiate football today in Philadelphia at Temple stadium.

The teams are meeting for the forty-fourth time in a series that began in 1894. Over the years, Howard has won 19, lost 17 and seven games have ended in ties.

The Washingtonians go into today's game the favorite. The Bisons have won five and lost three and a victory over their traditional rival clinches a successful season. 27-19.

Quantico Plays At Norfolk Navy

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—The Quantico Marines meet Norfolk Naval Base here at 10 a. m. tomorrow to decide the Navy's Middle Atlantic Group football championship.

Despite the fact that Quantico still is without the service of its best "T" passers, Rudy Flores and Roy Russell, the Marines are slight favorites. Last week, Quantico downed Niagara U., 27-19.

Pancho Chases Kramer Tonight

By Jules Loh

THE TENNIS CROWD around town has its annual opportunity to "ooh" and "ah" tonight to the strokes of two of the game's masters, Jack Kramer and Pancho Gonzales.

Gonzales

Currently on a Nation-wide professional exhibition tour, Kramer and Gonzales will match their cannonball services in the feature match of a show on the indoor court at Uline Arena. First match is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Kramer, one of the game's all-time greats, has been giving a sound drubbing to the more youthful Gonzales, winner of the national amateur title last September just before he turned pro.

In 20 matches on their national swing, Gonzales has managed to win only three, but the big, easy-going kid from California figures he will wear Kramer down before their 300-match marathon ends.

And not a few fans are of the same notion that the colorful American-born Mexican is liable to break Big Jake's win streak at any minute and start one of his own.

Kramer, however, has been playing with the same consistency with which he whipped Bobby Riggs in their 1948 tour. He has kept Gonzales under control with his big service and has been the one to put away the greater margin of volleys.

Even though more than half the matches have been straight set decisions for Kramer, they have been closer than Kramer likes for them to be.

Kramer took a 12-10 second set at New Haven, won after three deuced sets in New York, and copped a grueling 19-17 rubber set last week in Baltimore.

Compard favorably by Riggs, promoter of the present tour, to Bill Tilden, Kramer obviously feels that he must beat Pancho unmercifully on this tour to dispel any doubt that he is the best pro in the country.

Principally because of his gritty comeback at Forrest Hills last fall in winning the national amateur title, Gonzales will be the sentimental favorite in tonight's match.

Kramer

Gonzales is a moody sort of guy and should he sense that the crowd is with him, he may give it that extra effort that would enable him to beat Kramer in this one.

In a preliminary, Pancho Segura, the two-fisted South American, will take on Frankie Parker, the lackadaisical former ball boy who twice became National amateur champion.

Entrust Sprints Into Early Lead to Win Bowie Purse at $8.60

Some Eye Derby

10 Juveniles Run Today in Bowie 'Cap

Bowie, Md., Nov. 23.—Ten juveniles, some with Kentucky Derby possibilities, clash tomorrow in the $10,000 added Endurance Handicap, last big test of the year for the current 2-year-old division. Upward of 20,000 customers, with the excuse of working up an appetite are expected to see the turkey day show.

While the test of a mile and 70 yards does not include a standout favorite of the lock type, the mutuel play seems likely to settle for the most part on the chances of Hasty House Farm's Lot O' Luck and A. S. Hewitt's Cornwall.

Lot O' Luck, a full brother to the well-known Calumet Farm's Pot O' Luck, gains support, despite top weight of 122 pounds, from his second to the crack Oil Capital in the Pimlico Futurity. Jockey R. L. Baird, star Midwest rider flew in from Miami for the booting job.

Two 1949 stake winners who may awake with a bang are G. M. Cohen's Jess Linthicum and Taylor Leatherbury's Eastern Flyway.

3-to-1 Shot Staves Off Lucky Ned

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 23.—By the simple but effective method of running the speed horses into the ground and staving off the drives of the fast closers, William Zeigler, jr's. Entrust won the St. Mary's purse featuring the Thanksgiving-Eve program.

The son of Fighting Fox, an invader from Jamaica, led Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lucky Ned to the wire by a length with the latter holding a like margin over Mrs. M. F. Drinkhouse's Third Ace. A field of eight competed.

Jockey Conselato Errico did an excellent job aboard the colt and booted him the six furlongs in 1.11 3-5, the good time being registered despite wind of gale proportions whipping across the course.

With New Oxford the favorite over him by 10 cents on the dollar, Entrust returned an $8.60 win mutuel. A crowd of 6500 saw the field of 3-year-olds vie for the $3500 purse.

Jockey Willie Downs, one-time Charles Town ace, accounted for top money in the fifth event, second best offering on the chilly program. He brought C. L. Creswell's Blue Holly home in front of Mrs. J. M. Lingle's Cinder Foot and Kee-Dee Stable's Miss Gossip. The winner paid $10.60.

There was no reason for the backers of Blue Fedora and Blue Rocket to feel blue. Those who backed this 3-and-1 combination in the daily double received a $159.40 payoff.

AT BOWIE

DEAR FOLKS: There's a side show here these days. Six men grouped in the stands work furiously on figures and charts between races. Just what they are doing outsiders have been unable to determine. One man seems to be in charge and collects the data of the workers. They are allergic to newspapermen including cameramen. Unless they are signalling to a confederate, they are not making bets because they don't move. Asked if it were a private club, a business concern or what, the mysterious guys clammed up. I felt like telling them my figures story about the man who took the two prettiest horses, added their post numbers and played the result . . . "For instance," he said, "No. 1 and No. 4 were the prettiest in the last race, so I added them and played No. 6." Informed that one and four totaled five he snapped. "There you go with those darn figures again."

Players of the Week

RAY LUCKETT
Montgomery Blair

Ray Luckett, Montgomery Blair fullback, gets The Washington Post's nod as high school player of the week for his work in leading Blair to a 20-12 win over their traditional rivals, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and thus winning the Montgomery County championship.

Luckett, a 180-pound senior, scored one touchdown, set up another and played the full game on both offense and defense.

It was his punting, however, which kept Bethesda bottled up all day, that really paid off. Ray averaged 42.3 yards for four boots, angling two out of bounds inside the B-CC ten-yard line.

He completed 5 of 11 passes good for 71 yards and also added Blair's first extra point, passing to Bill Larimore for the point after touchdown.

Other players deserving honorable mention this week were Bruce Hillenbrand and Jack Gilfillan Washington-Lee backs for W-L's 39-0 win over Fairfax; Ray Fox for Tech's win over Central to gain the Interhigh championship game; Mickey Curtis, who was a standout in defeat as Wilson beat Chamberlain, 20-6, and Arnie Tranen, Coolidge back, who passed to three touchdowns, scored one himself and added two extra points.

JOHN BYRNE
Gonzaga

John "Bucky" Byrne, Gonzaga guard, has turned in a good performance in every game the Eagles have played this year, but last week against Georgetown Prep he outdid himself.

The five-foot ten-inch, 180 - pound youngster gained for himself The Washington Post commendation as Prep School player of the week by his line play.

Bucky seemed to spend more time in the Little Hoyas' backfield than he did on the Gonzaga line and his drive and spirit were visible even in the stands, where line play is seldom noticed.

John calls the defensive formations for the Eagles and is the natural leader in the line, even though he is only a junior. Watch this boy go next year.

He is a team player all the way and has a peculiar talent of being able to pick up the morale of the squad when they want to let down. He goes at full steam for the entire game and pulls the rest of the boys along with him.

Honorable mention on the prep school front goes to Chick Richardson, DeMatha back who scored the only touchdown as his team won, 7-2.

MacArthur to Army: There's No Substitute For Win; Whelchel to Navy: It Can Be Done

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—Vice Admiral John (Billick) Whelchel (ret.) told the Navy football team and the rest of the Middies tonight that "it can be done."

He should know. He was coach of the last team that licked the Army. That was back in 1943, when Navy made 13 points while holding Army scoreless.

Admiral Whelchel was the principal speaker at the last big Academy pep rally before Saturday's service classic in Philadelphia.

Phil Ryan, end and captain, promised the Middies that it would be done.

Coach George Sauer's sentiments were unknown. He failed to show up at the rally.

(Last night, Sauer told The Washington Post that he was on the practice field late with several of his boys and got to the rally when the speech-making was over. His sentiments, he thought, are no secret.)

Most of the 3000 Midshipmen were on hand to whoop it up. Afterwards, most of them took their girls to a "Beat Army" hop.

Half of Navy's football squad facing Army will be sophomores.

Wouldn't first-year varsity players be expected to be nervous in such a classic before so many people?

"That's the advantage of playing a tough schedule such as ours," Coach George Sauer said today in knocking down any such idea. "After playing a big game every week by the time we reach the Army game we're used to it."

Meanwhile, Coach Sauer is satisfied with the way his squad is catching the "Beat Army" fever that has the Naval Academy boiling over.

"The brigade is going just wild and the players are beginning to catch it," reported Sauer. "We won't have to stick the needle in too far to get them ready Saturday."

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—The "Beat Navy" fever reached a new high for Army today as the Cadets read a letter from a famous graduate—Gen. Douglas MacArthur—telling them "There is no substitute for victory."

The letter, written in long hand, said:

"From the Far East I send you one single thought, one sole idea—written in red on every beachhead from Australia to Tokyo—there is no substitute for victory."

Victory is something the all-winning Army team and the Cadets on the Plains are accustomed to, but defeating Navy in Philadelphia Saturday is the big goal for any Army eleven.

Cold again forced the Black Knights of the Hudson to practice indoors. But it didn't lighten the work schedule Coach Earl Blaik had mapped for them. And the Cadets, who are not taking the four-times beaten Navy team lightly, went through blocking and tackling maneuvers with full steam.

Arlingtonian Wins Trip to Service Game

A YOUTHFUL ALL-NAVY couple carry off the grand prize in The Washington Post's final Pick-the-Winners contest.

Morris Wells, 710 North Wayne st., Arlington, turned in the top entry among 15,255 contestants and won the all-expense trip for two to Saturday's Army-Navy classic.

Wells, 27, an insurance executive, called the turn on 18 of 20 games and missed the Virginia-Tulane score by only 4 points.

It wasn't necessary to use his score in the tie-breaking twenty-first game, but 15 runners-up missed only 3 of 20 games.

A native of Gaithersburg, Md., until his recent marriage, Wells and wife, Jeannette, will be spending their ninth-month anniversary, less a day, in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium.

Their sympathies lie with underdog Navy. Wells has the Navy to thank for his bride. He attended Miami, Ohio, University then was sent to Washburn at Topeka, Kans., in the V-12 program.

It was there he met Jeannette, who later served as a WAVE officer. The Wells say they hope Army hasn't a chance and the expert himself predicts: Navy, 20; Army, 14.

For the first season in the three-year history of the contest, a woman failed to win the big prize.

Three, however, were among last week's runnersup. They were Pauline M. Papieck, 608 Third st. nw.; Mrs. W. J. O'Brien, 5216 Eighth rd., S., Arlington, and Mabel K. Ramsey, 4833 S. 29th st., Arlington.

Cautious Monty Takes 2-1 Odds As Army Rooter

By The Associated Press

Field Marshal Montgomery got down a cautious bet of $5 to $10 here yesterday on Army to beat Navy in their football game Saturday.

The visiting British war hero obtained these odds from George Tames, New York Times photographer.

Tames made one condition: If Montgomery loses, he has to pay by check. That will give the photographer a souvenir.

The bet was made while photographers were getting pictures of Montgomery at lunch with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Deputy Secretary Stephen Early and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Bradley, an old Army man, bet $5 on Navy. Herbert White, Associated Press photographer, needled him into it by offering $10 to $5 on Army.

Sugar Radio Gets O. K. for Cup Play

The Maryland State Soccer Association yesterday granted permission to Sugar Radio to compete in the Stewart and Rowland Cup playoffs. Sugar also will be able to defend its championship in the county playoffs, heretofore open only to the winners of the leagues in Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The ruling enables Washington to be represented by two, and possibly three, teams in the second round of the Stewart Cup tournament.

D. C. Soccer Back Captains Lehigh

Terps Retain 3d Place in Total Defense

The mighty Maryland line continues to help the Terps maintain their national defensive record, National Collegeate Athletic Bureau figures revealed yesterday.

There and thereabouts all season, Maryland still is rated third in the country on total defense, trailing only Kentucky and Wyoming. On rushing defense, Jim Tatum's lads are seventh.

Maryland has its game with West Virginia at College Park today and a December 2 engagement at Miami, Fla., to try to improve on its mark of allowing only 191.4 yards per game.

Individually, North Carolina's Art Weiner took over the pass receiving lead with 48 receptions for 670 yards. And teammate Charlie Justice is leading all punters with an imposing 44.8 average on 57 boots.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

Larger Checks Coming To Those Hurt on Job; Death Benefits Up

This Thanksgiving will have real meaning for the thousands of Federal workers who were injured on the job as well as the families of employes killed in work accidents.

These unfortunate people are beginning to receive larger checks from Uncle Sam under a bill signed into law by the President several weeks ago. The new law is the most liberal workman's compensation system in the world. It will raise benefits an estimated seven million dollars annually.

Last year alone 74,000 Federal workers were injured on the job and 35,230 of these cases involved loss of time from work. The cost of these accidents was approximately nine million dollars.

Thousands of injured employes and the families of employes killed on the job suffered financially as well as physically under the old law which was geared to mid-century pay levels. The old law was based on the theory of a $2000 annual average salary and the maximum benefit under it for total disability was a mere $116.66 monthly. That maximum is lifted to $525 per month under the new bill.

For the first time in the 33-year history of the compensation law, a schedule of awards is provided for employes who suffer permanent losses. These awards are payable in addition to amounts for temporary total disability and are proportioned to the percent loss of function or extent of dismemberment. The following schedule represents 100 percent losses:

Arm, 312 weeks pay; leg, 288; hand, 244; foot, 205; eye, 160; thumb, 75; first finger, 46; great toe, 38; second finger, 30; third finger, 25; toe (other than great toe), 16; fourth finger, 15; complete loss of hearing in one ear, 52, and loss of hearing in both ears, 200.

In instances of 100 percent loss or impairment and where loss of earning capacity continues, compensation payments may be extended beyond the periods provided in the above schedule. In addition, awards up to $3500 can be made for serious disfigurement of the face, head, or neck and where such injuries are of a character to handicap persons in securing or maintaining employment.

The act provides that in instances of permanent injury the previous requirement of a three-day waiting period be waived. Also, a waiting period is no longer required in temporary disability cases where the disability extends more than 21 days beyond any annual or sick leave the injured employe may elect to use.

The basic compensation of an injured single employe is 66 2/3 percent of his salary, but an employe with one or more dependents can receive an additional 8 1/3 percent of his monthly wage. This will unquestionably result in a majority of cases receiving 75 percent of the monthly salary rate during any period of disability.

Equally important is the fact that the basic rate now applies to salaries up to $9450 a year, against the old $2100 maximum. But in no case can the monthly compensation exceed $525 a month, or $6300 annually. The 8 1/3 percent differential for a dependent in temporary disability cases applies only to that part of monthly pay not in excess of $420.

Death benefits also are boosted under the new law. Widows are to receive a rate of 45 percent and each child 15 percent up to a maximum of $525 a month, depending on the salary rate of the employe who was killed on the job. The old rate was an inadequate 35 percent to widows and 10 percent for each child up to a monthly maximum of $116.66. Burial benefits have likewise been increased from a maximum of $200 to $400, and the Government will pay the cost of shipping a body back home whenever an employe is killed in line of duty away from his home.

Employes requiring full-time attendants because of their injuries are entitled up to $75 additional per month, or $25 more than the former allowance. Employes undergoing vocational rehabilitation are also to be allowed an additional $50 a month.

The minimum monthly rate of compensation for total disability, not counting attendant and rehabilitation allowances, has been increased to $112.50. The old rate was $58.33. The new minimum is nearly as high as the former $116.66 monthly maximum.

Club's Tax Exemption Is Denied

The clouded tax affairs of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Inc., became even more confused yesterday when it was learned that Montgomery County fiscal officials refused to approve an Appeal Tax Court ruling to exempt the clubhouse property from real estate taxes.

The court's order, handed down after a hearing September 28, exempted the property at 7431 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, from 1949-50 taxes of $1225 and subsequent levies in future years.

By law, all exemptions granted by the tax court must be concurred in by the County Director of Finance and Supervisor of Assessments.

Act Not Retroactive

Finance Director Alexander K. Hancock said denial of the exemption was made after County Attorney David Macdonald rendered an opinion that an act of the State Legislature, effective June 1, granting exemption to certain types of clubs is not retroactive. The established date of finality for filing of tax appeals is May 1.

"In view of this ruling and the further fact there was nothing improper or erroneous about the assessment itself, there was no other course than to reject the claim," Hancock said.

Supervisor of Assessments Wilton T. Allen concurred with Hancock's statement.

The opinion rendered by Macdonald was the same advanced by him at the tax court hearings as a part of the county's unsuccessful attempt to defeat the club's protest.

Fails to Qualify

He also argued then that the club does not qualify for exemption under the language of the legislative act as one whose purposes "are of a charitable, benevolent and civic nature."

Mrs. Kathryn Lawlor, who pleaded the club's case before the tax court, said she will recommend to the club that it file an appeal with the State Tax Commission. The tax money has been paid to the county.

A suit for setting aside 1948-49 taxes is now pending before the State Court of Appeals following an adverse ruling in Montgomery Circuit Court last August.

Howat Successor Strong Supporter Of Private Means To Solve Problems

Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the American Road Builders Association, yesterday was elected unanimously as chairman of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency for a four-year term.

Upham, strong supporter of the doctrine of solving city parking problems by private enterprise rather than governmental operation of facilities, succeeds P. Y. K. Howat, who resigned recently because he moved out of the District.

Final Report Made

Howat's final report, submitted to the agency meeting yesterday, reaffirmed his belief in the unit's original program of encouraging development of express buses over express streets, fringe parking with shuttle buses and erection of more downtown garages.

Howat declared "private enterprise has made considerable progress in solving the downtown parking problems" here and "will do still more with proper cooperation, stimulation and assistance by the District government."

The retiring chairman underscored his earlier proposal to allow "legal, but controlled and limited, parking of automobiles between the building line and sidewalk in front of commercial parking lots, in instances where this does not interfere with traffic or detract from the neighborhood."

The Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board approved on Monday a recommendation that parking be permitted on public space between sidewalks and building lines in residential and commercial industrial areas to add at least 5000 parking spaces here.

Freight Train Kills Virginian In Alexandria

Robert Evans, 27, of Route 1, Gum Springs, Va., was killed last night when he was hit by a Southern Railway freight train in the 400 block Wilkes st., Alexandria, Va.

The cars were being pulled by a shifting engine at the time, police say.

The train apparently failed to stop after Evans was hit. Police said they discovered blood on the wheels of a freight car in a nearby railyard following the 7 p. m. accident.

Evans' body was removed to the Alexandria Hospital morgue where it was identified by Evans' wife, Bernice.

'Headache' Boy Headed for Grand Jury

Robert L. Archie, 25, had a long explanation of why he was prowling in Walter Reed Hospital early yesterday in a blue T-shirt and candy-stripe shorts.

But United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, somewhat skeptical, held Archie in $1500 bond for action of the grand jury on a charge of housebreaking.

Shortly before 2 a. m., Lieut. Eugene W. Pearce was awakened by a noise in his room in the bachelor officer quarters.

He sprinted to his door after noticing that his wallet, which had contained $3, was missing from the top of the dresser. Making fast tracks down the steps was a man in T-shirt and shorts.

Pearce finally collared the man and he was turned over to police. But no wallet was found on him.

The man with the flair for brilliant underclothing identified himself as Archie, a temporary postal worker from Philadelphia and an army veteran of the Okinawa campaign.

Archie said he came here to seek treatment for a recurring headache at Walter Reed on the advice of the Veterans Administration office in Philadelphia.

However, his method of checking into the hospital was slightly unorthodox. No one knew Archie was there but Archie.

Commissioner Lawrence recommended hospitalization for the defendant.

Arlington Jail to Get Phone, Avoid Dismissal Repetition

A pay telephone will be installed in the Arlington County jailhouse to permit defendants to make phone calls, and "there won't be any more mistakes," Sheriff J. Elwood Clements said yesterday.

The sheriff said he put in a requisition for the phone following Judge Hugh Reid's dismissal Tuesday of the case of Ernest Schoener, jr., charged with driving while drunk. Judge Reid said he found the man's civil rights violated.

The judge acquitted Schoener, he said in a memorandum, despite the fact that "the evidence actually adduced in court would ordinarily justify a conviction." Evidence failed to show the defendant had been allowed to contact his employer immediately after bond was set.

The judge pointed out in his memorandum that "there is no jail record of any telephone call to notify the employer . . . (though) the sheriff's instructions require that such records be kept."

The jailer on duty, Henry Ames, testified in court he didn't remember whether or not he made a phone call to Schoener's employer Frank Aiken.

However, Sheriff Clements said yesterday, Ames later told him he found the number of Schoener's employer jotted down on the back of the man's police commitment card.

According to the sheriff, Ames said he then remembered having called the number and received no answer. Schoener could not suggest another number to call, Ames told the sheriff.

The note on the commitment card did not prove the call had been made, the sheriff said yesterday. He said that the call and its result should have been recorded in another file.

Installation of the new pay phone, probably by Friday, will relieve the jailer of the necessity of making calls for defendants on his own phone. Defendants will make their own calls, but a record will still be kept of where the call is made, and its results, Clements said.

Sheriff Asks Exercise Area for Prisoners

Arlington County Sheriff J. Elwood Clements said yesterday he has requested a recreation and exercise area be built on the roof of the new county jail. The 38-cell jail will occupy the third floor of a new courthouse wing now under construction.

The exercise area is specially needed, the Sheriff said, because arrested prisoners, who cannot make bond, often wait from four to seven months in jail before the process of trial and sentence is completed.

This is because persons arrested in the summer, after the June term of Circuit Court, must await the October court term before they can even be indicted.

In a report on activities of his office so far this year, which included the recommendation for an exercise area, the sheriff also noted that 2108 persons have been committed to the present county jail since January 1, 1949. A total of 7407 civil processes has been served, already an increase of 257 services over 1948, the report said.

Velazquez Paintings of Habsburg Children Among Vienna Treasures on Exhibit Here

THE INFANTE PHILIP PROSPER

THE INFANTA MARGARETA TERESA

THE INFANTE BALSTASAR CARLOS

THE INFANTA MARIA TERESA

Paintings of Spanish royal children by Diego Rodriguez de Silva y Velasquez (1599-1660)

By Jane Watson Crane

With a court painted at hand, the Habsburgs could commission family portraits lavishly. When a royal daughter was approaching womanhood or a male heir arrived to hold the line of succession, they spread the news by sending paintings to relatives and neighboring powers.

During the reign of Philip IV of Spain the court painter, Velazquez, was kept busy painting the King and his family. The portraits, which have become world-famous, appear today in museums and private collections here and abroad. Some of the finest are of 'teenagers and toddlers, painted with almost magic skill and a rigid, unchildlike formality. Looking at the faces of the little Habsburgs, one wonders if they ever had any fun.

Included in the paintings from the Austrian collection at the National Gallery of Art are portraits of Philip IV's children by both marriages. There is also a small canvas of their father, whom Velazquez painted again and again.

Of the sons, neither lived to manhood. Balthasar Carlos, who appears here in a handsome full-length portrait, was the son of Philip IV and his first wife, Isabella of France. Ever with an eye to strategic marriages for his children, the father arranged the son's betrothal at a tender age to the Archduchess Maria Anna of Austria. The death of the boy at 17 precluded this alliance, but later the King married the lady himself as his second wife. The best-known portrait of Balthasar Carlos by Velazquez is the one in Madrid, where he appears as a child on a prancing fat pony.

The other boy seen at the National Gallery is Philip Prosper whose portrait as a baby is one of the gems of the entire exhibit. He was the third child of the second marriage. There was great rejoicing when he was born, since the death of Balthasar Carlos had left no male heir to the throne.

Velazquez was ordered to make portraits of the baby prince and his sister to be sent to the Emperor of Austria, to calm the agitation of the Viennese court over the marriage of their half-sister to the King of France. But the little boy, on whom so many hopes were centered, died when he was still a baby, and though Philip had two more sons, the French heirs finally gained the throne of Spain.

Maria Teresa Depicted

Two daughters of Philip of Spain are seen in portraits by Velasquez at the National Gallery. The one of Maria Teresa, Balthasar Carlos' sister, was probably originally full-length, but has been cut down at the bottom and possibly also at the top. Portraits of this princess increased as she approached marriageable age, the one here having been done about six years before she became Queen of France.

Philip Prosper's older sister, Margareta Teresa, is shown here at the ages of approximately three and five. She is the little girl who steals the show in one of Velasquez' greatest paintings, "The Maids of Honor," in Madrid. She was engaged to the Emperor Leopold I of Austria when she was 13, and two years later was married to him.

Velaquez spent most of his life as court painter to Philip IV. He had a succession of duties besides painting, sometimes taxing, sometimes mainly honorary. Rubens aroused his curiosity to visit Italy, and he managed a trip with the King's consent. It is interesting to compare the portraits of the older and younger children, the latter in this case being the finer. Velaquez was an objective painter, whose aim was to convey what he saw, not what he felt. But occasionally in these portraits of royal children a note of tenderness creeps in.

8089 View Vienna Art In Day for 68,058 Total

The exhibition of art treasures from Vienna at the National Gallery of Art yesterday drew 8089 persons, making a total of 68,058 visitors since the opening Sunday.

The gallery is open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. today and other week days, and from 2 to 10 p. m. Sundays.

New Appeal for Ban Warns Bus Radio Causes Mental Ills

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new appeal was made yesterday to the District Public Utilities Commission to put an end to radio broadcasts in Capital Transit streetcars and buses.

The appeal was made in a brief filed by attorneys Franklin S. Pollak and Guy Martin.

Attorneys for Capital Transit and for Washington Transit Radio, Inc., by whose contract the radio service was set up, declined comment. They plan to answer it within 10 days, either in separate briefs or a combined brief. A PUC decision on the transit radio issue now appears likely before the end of this year, officials said.

Pollak and Martin called for a two-edged order by the PUC, first to ban installation of more radio receivers in transit vehicles, and second to prohibit reception of broadcasts on those now installed.

They also suggested that hearings should be reopened in the event the PUC should place any stress on the question of what the future revenue to the transit company from the radio broadcasts might be.

Pollak and Martin proposed that the PUC establish the following statements, among others, as findings of fact:

"Serious mental and physical injury will be done to a number of riders by compulsory subjection to these radio programs . . . on the basis of present installation in 212 vehicles.

"The mental and physical harm . . . will be increased if radio receivers are placed in all 1500 vehicles of Capital Transit Co.

"The radio programs in the buses, because of their effect on some of the operators, increase the likelihood of accidents and are a danger to public safety.

"The riders on Capital Transit Co.'s vehicles, other than chartered buses, are a captive audience, which cannot escape the radio broadcasts.

"The harm which these radio programs do to the objectors is much greater than the good which they do to those who like them."

Pollak and Martin declared the transit broadcasts violate the first and fifth amendments of the Constitution by depriving objectors of freedom of speech, and by taking property without due process of law.

Freedom of speech, they said, includes "freedom of listening and reading, and freedom not to listen and not to read. That freedom is violated here because the broadcasts, at one and the same time, compel attention to what is being said and interfere with giving attention to something the rider may desire to read."

As for the deprivation of property without due process of law, Pollak and Martin wrote, "The properties taken are time and health. The taking is by noise."

Their brief added:

"The deprivation of liberty and property and the taking of property are by governmental action, not private action, because of the presence of governmental power in compelling subjection to these programs, through governmental sanction of the monopolistic position of Capital Transit Co. and governmental protection of the property in the radio receivers.

"This is the first case, so far as we know, in which American business enterprises have sought the support of the United States Government for forcing their solicitations on a captive audience whose objecting members are totally unable to defend themselves from importunities which so intrude upon their freedom of thought and their health."

Lauderdale Resignation Announced Officially

Resignation of James W. Lauderdale from the District Public Utilities Commission was officially announced by the White House yesterday.

A member of the PUC for three years and an Assistant Corporation Counsel or People's Counsel for 12 years before that, Lauderdale will leave November 30 to return to private practice. He will become a partner in the firm of Keane & Michelet.

Smithsonian is Given Odom's Nonstop Plane

By The Associated Press

The airplane in which the late Bill Odom made a nonstop flight from Honolulu to Teterboro, N. J., last March has been presented to the Smithsonian Institution. It was presented by the Beech Aircraft Co., Wichita, Kans., which owned it, and has been flown to Park Ridge Field, Ill., where Smithsonian has some aircraft.

Arrangements for the presentation were made by the office of Senator Schoeppel (R., Kans.). Odom was killed recently when a plane he was flying crashed at the National Air Races in Cleveland.

CTC Warning Of Fare Raise Is Challenged

Statement Issued By Company in '47 Wage Dickering Cited by Union

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Capital Transit Co.'s warnings that a fare increase or cut in service is necessary were challenged yesterday by the firm's union employes.

The union's counsel, Eli Oliver, told an arbitration board the company issued a similar statement during the 1947 arbitration case and no increase in fares took place until a year later.

Oliver placed in the record a news story published in the fall of 1947 which quoted firm officials as charging a wage increase would require higher fares.

Declining Revenue Cited

On Tuesday, J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of CTC, testified that a fare increase was necessary to offset declining revenues even without any change in wage rates. He said the company will need $1,033,000 next year to keep up present service at existing wage scales.

Oliver said the 1947 arbitration resulted in a pay boost for employes and this raise was supplemented by another 10 cents an hour in July, 1948, while the fare boost did not go into effect until October 31, 1948.

Heberle countered that reduction in service and the 1948 fare rise were direct results of the 1947 arbitration award. He said the delay in requesting the fare boost was because of a Public Utilities Commission order directing the company to make all possible economies before applying for a price rise.

Oliver questioned Heberle's statements on the firm's requirements for depreciation purposes and for payments of dividends to stockholders.

Six Million Available

He cited an Interstate Commerce Commission report of May 31 showing the firm's current assets as $9,814,384 with only liabilities of $3,612,588, leaving a fund of more than six million dollars "available for distribution as dividends."

At least two and a half million of this could be passed to shareholders immediately, Oliver declared. When Heberle questioned this statement, Oliver shouted, "If you wanted to declare a dividend, you could, Mr. Heberle."

Heberle said he would answer this in the closing arguments Tuesday. The union will speak first starting at 9:30 a. m. and the company will conclude in the afternoon. A decision is expected about December 15.

The union representative said the company's estimate for depreciation needs was improper since it represented an average of modernization expenditures during the past 10 years—a process now practically completed—and did not take into consideration a $21,793,009 depreciation reserve fund which has been built up.

Stevens School

500 Pupils Are Put Out By Flames

A roof fire at Stevens Elementary School, 21st and L sts. nw., yesterday sent more than 500 pupils home two minutes earlier than usual.

The small blaze apparently started in a rain gutter in the rear of the building and worked through a window, charring a few attic timbers before three engine and two truck companies re- and to a local alarm.

Mrs. Gladys J. Martin, a fifth-grade teacher, said one of her students first noticed the smoke from a classroom window.

Since it was then 2:58 p. m., two minutes before dismissal time, school officials ordered the janitor to ring the regular recess bell, rather than the fire alarm, to avoid undue concern among the pupils.

The building was entirely vacated when firemen arrived. Damage was said to be negligible.

A second school fire of undetermined origin was discovered at 5:30 p. m. yesterday in the Merritt-Miller school, Hayes st. and Lowrie rd. ne. It was extinguished before any damage was done.

Driver Hurt As Truck Goes Out of Control

A 21-year-old Maryland truck driver suffered internal injuries yesterday afternoon when he lost control of his runaway truck, which overturned, in the 2300 block of Good Hope rd. se.

Earl Moreland of 4378 Carlton ave., Capitol Heights, Md., was in an undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital. Trapped in the truck's cab, he was extricated by the rescue squad.

The truck was demolished.

Child, 5, Badly Burned While Parents Shop

A 5-year-old child was severely burned yesterday despite heroic efforts of her brothers and sisters while the parents were shopping for a Thanksgiving turkey.

Five-year-old Jo Anne Alestock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer William Alestock, was left in their home, 1220 Carrollburg pl. sw., with four of her nine brothers and sisters while her parents took the others shopping.

The youngster was stirring up a fire in the kitchen stove when the red-hot poker ignited her dress. She was rushed to Emergency Hospital, later transferred to Children's Hospital with first, second and third-degree burns on the stomach, chest, thigh, side and back.

Prince Georges Health Setup Is Assailed as Antiquated

Prince Georges County is "20 years behind the times' in recognition of its responsibility to protect community health, a county League of Women Voters committee reported yesterday.

The statement was contained in a 3-page report sent to the Board of Election Supervisors in Upper Marlboro, Md., by the health and welfare committee of the Prince Georges County League of Women's Voters.

The present county health staff of 10 nurses, two supervising nurses, an assistant on temporary loan from the United States Public Health Service and a health officer is entirely inadequate, the league declared, and should be serving a community of 60,000 instead of the present 180,000.

Based on Nation-wide public health standards, the league set 37 nurses, a school physician, an assistant and a public health officer as "the minimum staff that could be expected to give a county with the population of Prince Georges the kind of health service that a modern community should have."

The committee study singled out mothers and children of the county as chief sufferers from lack of funds and trained health personnel.

"Until the county invests more money in health services and thus acquires the needed minimum staff," the report said, "our school children will probably continue to be deprived of the important health services that are now considered to be a part of the modern standard educational system."

Other top deficiencies in the over-all county health program, according to the league's school health study, are: (1) A school dental program, and (2) Special provisions for the handicapped.

"We have lost the only physiotherapist we had," the report explained, "and the crippled children who come to the orthopedic clinic are not receiving the care that might help them to overcome very serious handicaps."

In addition, the league emphasized a "great need" for clinical psychologists, speech correctionists, an eye clinic and other specialists.

Pointing to State and county laws requiring inoculations against small-pox and diphtheria, the report said:

"Because the Health Department does not have the staff to service these preschool clinics (for inoculations) and because of the position taken by the County Medical Society, these clinics are open only to children who cannot afford to pay for the required services. These preschool clinics service mostly the white schools."

The league praised the County Health Department as "excellent," considering its limited budget, which "is only a fraction of what it should be."

R. J. Hopley Dead; Civil Defense Head

Russell J. Hopley, 54, president of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. and author of a plan for civil preparedness in event of war, died yesterday at an Omaha (Nebr.) hospital.

He entered the hospital November 9 for treatment of a gall bladder ailment and was making satisfactory recovery until a heart attack caused his death.

Mr. Hopley was named Civil Defense director in March, 1948, by the late James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Defense. During his nine months' service in the post he drafted a Nation-wide civil defense plan which called for a permanent office of civil defense under the executive branch of the Government.

A highlight of the controversial Hopley report was peacetime training of a half million citizens in a civil defense program designed to include 15 million in case of war.

There was considerable debate over whether the defense plan would be under military direction. In the end it was allowed to die.

Mr. Hopley was born in Blue Island, Ill. He began his telephone career at the bottom of the ladder in 1915, as a $40-a-month bill collector at Fort Madison, Iowa. He moved up and became operating vice president in 1937. He was named president of the five-State Northwestern Bell system in 1942.

A prominent civic leader in Omaha and Nebraska. Hopley served as general chairman of a committee which developed a 44 million dollar city-wide improvement program in Omaha.

He was a veteran of World War I and in the last war served as a member of the Army Air Forces' civilian aid committee which helped select officer personnel.

He leaves his wife and two teen-age boys.

Honest Gambler

Thousand Pass Bier of LaFontaine

More than 1000 persons—friends, relatives and the curious—yesterday filed past the bier of the king of Washington gamblers in the Lee Funeral Home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne.

Among the shabby and the well-dressed who came to pay last respects to James A. (Jimmy) La Fontaine, who died Monday at 81, was a former opponent, Crandal Mackey.

Mackey, as Commonwealth's Attorney many years ago, drove Jimmy out of Arlington. Mackey respected Jimmy as a man who kept his promise to take his gambling activities out of the county.

There were close friends in attendance, like Charles E. Ford, attorney, who was at Jimmy's death bed, and Herman Taylor, Philadelphia boxing promoter.

And there were those like Mrs. Jessie Ross, who had never seen Jimmy in life. Mrs. Ross once rented a house from his niece and "just wanted to pay her respects."

High requiem mass will be sung at 10 a. m. today in St. Dominic's Church, 515 6th st. sw. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Sheets' Funeral Held; Long in D. C.

A funeral service for Mrs. Leda Atkeson Sheets, 60, wife of Dr. Earl Wooddell Sheets, former animal husbandry chief of the Agriculture Department, was held yesterday. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Sheets

Mrs. Sheets died Saturday at her home, 1831 Lamont st. nw., after a brief illness. A native of Buffalo, W. Va., Mrs. Sheets graduated from West Virginia University where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Xi Delta.

She came to Washington in 1918 when her husband, then head of the animal husbandry department at the University of Nevada, joined the Agriculture Department. He left the Government in 1935.

Surviving, besides her husband, are three daughters, Miss Jane A. Sheets, Washington; Mrs. Helen S. Denton, St. Louis, and Mrs. Betty S. Treadwell, Seoul, Korea; two brothers, Karl C. Atkeson, Buffalo, W. Va., and Thomas Z. Atkeson, Columbia, Ala.; a sister, Mrs. Mary A. Moore, Washington, and a granddaughter, Suzanne Virginia Treadwell, Seoul.

George William Hess

George William Hess, 63, retired Capitol Hill employe, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital.

Mr. Hess, who lived at 1217 39th ave., Hillside, Md., had been ill five years. He retired three years ago after 35½ years service as an electrical operator in the power plant of the Capitol.

For many years his hobby was raising pigeons, some of which he sold. He gave many away to neighborhood children.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ethel M. Hess; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Burroughs; two sons, George Hess, jr., and Ralph Pumphrey, a stepson; a sister, Mrs. Ethel Loanhardt, and 11 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se., at 11:30 a. m. Saturday. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Richard Connell

Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP). Richard Connell, 56, screen and fiction writer, died of heart disease last night.

Born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he was graduated from Harvard University in 1915. After newspaper work he began his Hollywood career in 1930.

His film-writing included such pictures as "The Milky Way," "Rio Rita" and "The Kid from Brooklyn." He also was a contributor to magazines.

12 COUNTRIES REPRESENTED—Students of the Americanization School, 19th and California sts. nw., display the native costumes which they will wear at the school's annual bazaar, Monday, December 5, 1 to 9 p. m. The women, holding dolls also dressed in native costumes, represent 12 countries in Europe, South America and the Far East. The dolls will be sold at the bazaar

Rabbi Krass Dies; Fighter Against Bias

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Dr. Nathan Krass, 69, rabbi emeritus of Temple Emanu-El, died yesterday.

A champion of religious tolerance and the "old fashioned monogamous marriage," he was an outspoken opponent of the Soviet Union on the ground it denied religious liberty to Jews.

Dr. Krass held the pulpit of the temple for 10 years before his retirement in 1933.

In 1929 he supported the late Alfred E. Smith for President. In one address he said anyone afraid of another American because of his religion should "go back to a monarchy or a despotism."

He was educated at the University of Cincinnati and the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati. Later he studied at Harvard and the University of Chicago.

He was with synagogues in Donaldsville, La.; Muncie, Ind.; Owensboro, Ky.; Rochester, N. Y., and Brooklyn before joining Temple Emanu-El.

During his tenure, the temple moved to its new eight-million-dollar building at 5th ave. and 65th st.

Mrs. Patterson, Round Hill Leader, Dies

Round Hill, Va., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Mrs. Bertha Baber Patterson, 55, prominent club woman and church worker, died Tuesday night at Loudoun Hospital after an illness of several months. Her husband, Dr. J. S. Patterson, is a druggist here.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Thursday at the Round Hill Baptist Church with burial in Hillside Cemetery.

Born in Summers County, W. Va., Mrs. Patterson had lived in Loudoun County 40 years. She was a member of the Loudoun Hospital, former president of the county P.-T.A., a charter member of the Purcellville Garden Club and the Round Hill Women's Club. For many years she was treasurer of the Baptist Missionary Society.

She also leaves two daughters, Miss Dorothy Patterson of Round Hill and Mrs. Miles S. Lefferts of Arlington, Va.

Group Named to Press For Hatch Act Change

The Alexandria Democratic Club has appointed a committee to press for a Hatch Act amendment which would allow Federal workers to campaign, and hold office in local partisan elections.

Those on the committee are: Joseph Hyman, chairman; Mrs. Audrey Walz, Mrs. Edith Warne, Patrick Hayes and Bernard Sagelson.

Kefauver Dies At 99; Former Md. Delegate

Lewis F. Kefauver, 99-year-old retired farmer, building promoter and Republican officeholder, died yesterday at his Middletown (Md.) home.

A stanch Republican leader in Frederick County, the near-centenarian was a former member of the County Board of Education and the Maryland House of Delegates.

He was the chief promoter of the Braddock Heights residential development and at one time owned all the land on which the resort area is built. He also helped finance the Frederick and Middletown Electric Railway, later a part of the Potomac Edison System.

Born in 1850 on a farm east of Middletown, Mr. Kefauver lived there through the Civil War. He often said he clearly remembered the battle of South Mountain and knew John Brown of Harpers Ferry fame.

His survivors include six children: Howard of Libertytown, William, Daisy and Emma, who live at the Middletown family home; J. Orville of Mount Savage, Md., and Alden C. Kefauver of Washington.

Services will be held at his home at 2 p. m. Friday with burial in the Reformed Church of Middletown cemetery.

Robert Acorn Funeral Set For Friday

Funeral services for Robert E. Acorn, 53, Washington attorney and first president of the Washington chapter of the Amateur Athletic Union, will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Acorn

Mr. Acorn died Tuesday at Emergency Hospital. A native of Washington, his home was at 5608 Western ave., Chevy Chase.

Mr. Acorn graduated from Central High School, where he was captain of the football team. He attended Lafayette College and graduated from Georgetown University. In World War I, he was attached to the American Embassy in London.

He was a member of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia and the "C" Club, a Central High School alumni group.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Dorothy D. Acorn; a brother, Edward M. Acorn, and a sister, Miss Mildred Acorn of Colesville, Md.

Pallbearers from the Bar Association are: Joseph H. Batt, Austin F. Canfield, Guilford S. Jameson, R. Sidney Johnson, Earl Johnscher, Joseph T. Keating, J. Harold Kilcoyne, Percy W. Phillips, John E. Powell, David L. Riordan, Sidney S. Sachs and Edgar A. Wren.

Pallbearers from the Lambda Sigma Chapter Mr. Acorn headed at the Central High School are: Henry H. Elliott, John L. Fleming, Capt. Will L. Gates, USN; A. M. McLachlen, Joseph A. Marr, John M. Mason, Wilson Nairn and George Norris.

Samuel Cohen Reburial Set At Arlington

Graveside services for 1st Lieut. Samuel Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Cohen of 1373 Underwood st. nw., will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at Arlington National Cemetery.

Lieut. Cohen, an Air Forces navigator, was killed in action in July, 1943, during the invasion of Sicily. He entered the service in June, 1941, with the 121st Observation Squad of the District National Guard, and at the time of his death was with the Thirty-sixth Troop Carrier Squad. He was 26.

Lieut. Cohen graduated from Eastern High School, the University of Maryland and National University School of Law.

Surviving besides his parents are four brothers, Abe, William, Morris and Bernie Cohen, all former servicemen, and a sister, Miss Pauline Cohen, Washington.

SET FOR CARVING: Here's Paul Hume, music critic for The Washington Post, all ready to slice up a Thanksgiving turkey. He has the drumsticks turned toward him and a sharp knife firmly in hand.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

If You Can Read, You Can Carve

Stand Right Up to the Bird, Critic Advises

By Lucia Brown

"I CAN'T carve!"

That's what Post music critic Paul Hume said when we, hearing he was baking a great big gobbler for Thanksgiving, asked him to star in a series of carving pictures.

Paul, a bachelor who will soon become a benedict, is entertaining 12 guests, including his fiancee, at dinner today. He's cooking it all himself, too—making the cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, and everything. But as for carving, w-e-e-l-l, he guessed he'd get the turkey hacked apart somehow.

Quickly we unveiled the latest carving bulletin from the National Poultry and Egg Board. Paul eyed it skeptically but after a few minutes' perusal, agreed to make a trial run with bird and carving knife.

Everything came out just fine, so, if the proof of the pudding (beg pardon, turkey) is in the eating, we believe you'll find these tips helpful when you gather around your gobbler today:

First, be sure the critter is not overcrowded on the platter. The dish should be good and big and the parsley or other garnish removed to a side plate before you start on the bird.

A sharp knife is vital so, if yours isn't in the pink, sharpen it behind scenes before guests come to the table. It may save an awkward, hungry pause between the prayer of Thanksgiving and the carving.

Stand Right Up to It

YOU'LL FIND the job easier if you stand up to carve. Turn the legs toward you, veering slightly to the right if you're right-handed, to the left if you're left-handed.

Carve one side completely, then the other. Maybe only one side will be needed for your Thanksgiving feast and the other can be left intact for future reference.

Remove the leg first. Hold the drumstick firmly with your left hand, twisting it slightly away from the body. Holding knife in right hand, cut through skin by drawing blade back and forth. Sever leg at the joint. Then, pressing leg away from the body with flat side of knife, cut remaining skin on back. Place leg on side plate for easier handling.

Sever drumstick and thigh by holding leg with joint down and cutting through meat to the bone. Then, holding thigh with knife, press drumstick down with other hand until joint snaps.

Turn Leg While Slicing

SLICE LEG meat by holding drumstick at right angles to plate and cutting down, turning leg to get uniform slices. To slice thigh meat, straddle the bone with fork and cut meat in lengthwise strips.

Remove wing by placing knife at right-angles to breast about 1½ inches above wing and cutting straight down through skin and wing joint.

To slice breast meat, straddle keel bone with fork or insert fork in rib section on side opposite that being carved. Hold knife parallel to breast and cut with a sawing motion, starting first slice just above place wing was removed. Cut slices about ¼ inch thick or less.

P. S.—This is the "traditional" method. There are other—maybe fancier—ways to carve the bird, but this is the old reliable, tried and true, says the Poultry Board. Serve everybody a bit of white meat, a bit of dark, and plenty of dressing, and you'll have nothing but satisfied customers around your Thanksgiving table.

Here's How the Trumans' Turkey Will Be Stuffed

HOW are you stuffing your turkey today?

There will be chestnut dressing in the one at Blair House when President and Mrs. Truman, her mother, Mrs. David Wallace, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Wallace, gather around the Thanksgiving board.

Mrs. Truman's own recipe for this stuffing appears in "Diplomatic Dishes," a little cookbook to be issued tomorrow by the Mt. Holyoke College Club of Washington. Made in the form of a Christmas card, the booklet will be sold for the college endowment fund.

In case you'd like to try the dressing in your turkey today—and have chestnuts on hand—here's the way the recipe goes:

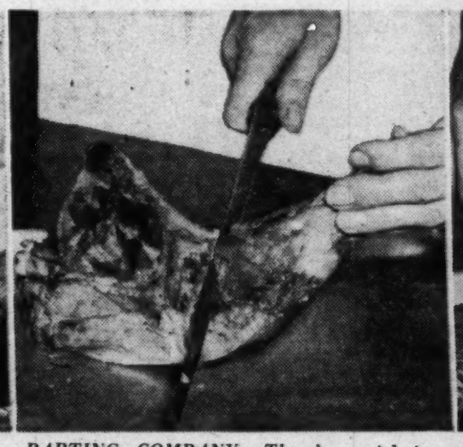
CHESTNUT DRESSING

2 pounds chestnuts
4 cups bread crumbs
1 small onion (chopped)
½ cup melted butter
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons finely chopped parsley

Cook chestnuts until soft. Drain and mash thoroughly through potato ricer. Add remaining ingredients and mix lightly.

Bess W. Truman

WHITE MEAT: Slice it from the breast after the wing has been removed, starting just above place where the wing used to be. Straddle keel joint with fork to hold the turkey firm and make slices about one-quarter-inch thick.



PARTING COMPANY: There's a trick in separating drumstick and thigh. Hold the leg at right angles to plate and cut through to the bone. Then hold thigh with knife and press drumstick down with other hand until joint snaps.

DARK MEAT: You'll get about 10 pieces of it from the drumstick, thigh, and "oyster" bone in the back of a 15-pound turkey if you slice it right. Hold drumstick at right angles to plate and cut down.

FDR, Jr., Retains Place in Social Register

New York, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The Social Register, that little black book of the blue bloods, rolled off the presses today, revealing that many heads have rolled, socially speaking, in the past 12 months.

Mary Ellin Berlin, 21, daughter of song writer Irving Berlin, was purged from the social roster because of her divorce from Dennis Sheedy Burden, who is still listed.

Divorce apparently didn't harm Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.'s, social standing. Young Roosevelt, his new bride, Suzanne Perin, and his former wife, Ethel du Pont, all are listed in the 1950 edition of the Register. But thrice-married Elliott Roosevelt, who's having marital difficulties with wife Faye Emerson, was out in the cold again this year.

Musicians Honored

MR. AND MRS. ORME WILSON entertained at a supper party for Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. Mitchell, following the concert last evening. Jan Tomasow, the orchestra's concert master, who appeared as violin soloist at the concert, was also an honor guest.

Business Club Head Offers Thanksgiving Tip; 'Emotional Cough' Needs Care, Luncheon Told

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Souré

WOMEN should give thanks for the world's growing recognition and acceptance of women's capabilities. This is the 1949 Thanksgiving message issued to 155,000 members of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs by the organization's national president, Dr. K. Frances Scott of Northampton, Mass.

Dr. Scott pointed out that more and more qualified women are winning a place in public life. She cited Mrs. Eugenie Anderson's appointment as United States Ambassador to Denmark, Mrs. Perle Mesta's appointment as United States Minister to Luxembourg. Others mentioned were Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, United States Treasurer, and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rhode, second woman to be appointed United States delegate to U. N. Mrs. Rhode is an alternate.

Commenting on world politics in general, Dr. Scott declared, "There is a growing attitude of acceptance by the American people of their position of world responsibility, and their role in working for world peace and economic stability.

"This gives us hope for the future as it proves that we are getting out of our adolescent attitude toward world problems," she continued. "We should certainly give thanks that we are growing up."

Dr. Pate Addresses Soroptimists

MOST PARENTS take care of their children's coughs and colds, but what about the youngsters' "emotional cough"?

Dr. John R. Pate posed the question to members of the Soroptimist Club yesterday at their weekly luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Although parents find the cause and cure of coughs, they sometimes don't know that misbehavior—or "emotional coughs"—shows that serious things are wrong.

Dr. Pate, medical director of the Child Guidance Clinic, hastened to add that all problem behavior is not indicative of emotional disturbance. "Some misbehavior, if handled wisely, is harmless and disappears," he said.

Not in the Obvious Place

CHILDREN don't hide their emotional problems in the obvious place, just as adults don't hide valuables under the bed, Dr. Pate said.

Mary's dislike for her teacher might take the form of extreme submissiveness, rather than the more obvious display of disobedience, for example.

It's the work of the Child Guidance Clinic to uncover the real problems of children and correct them before the youngsters become neurotic adults, Dr. Pate said.

The Soroptimist Club organized this clinic two years ago, when the members of the civics committee recognized a need here for treating the mental problems of children. Today the clinic is under the Bureau of Mental Hygiene in the District of Columbia Health Department.

Hugh Smith, who also spoke at the luncheon, told the members of case histories of two children, one aided by the clinic to a happy ending, and the other that ended unhappily. Both had a similar problem to begin with—lack of self-confidence.

"Let's hope that all the cases in the future will be as successfully solved as the ones the clinic has solved in the past," Mr. Smith said.

Books, Dollars Pour in

OVER 300 books, plus several hundred greenbacks, poured in yesterday when the Women's Board of George Washington University Hospital staged a book collection and tea at the hospital on Washington circle. Purpose of the tome gathering is to inaugurate a new circulating library for hospital patients.

At the same time the board officially welcomed a Junior Auxiliary of some 100 members into its ranks.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, board chairman, received a $150 check from Mrs. David Williams, auxiliary president. The sum is part of the Junior Auxiliary's pledge to provide $50 a month for use in the hospital's social service department. This will be used by needy patients who are awaiting public assistance or who need carfare and medicine at a time when regular social agency help is unavailable.

The Junior Auxiliary, which received official recognition yesterday, raised its contribution through benefit fashion shows, card parties and dinners. In addition to assisting as ushers at the board's benefit fashion shows, the Juniors serve as receptionists in the social service department and admitting office of the hospital. They also help entertain paraplegic patients. At present they are serving as volunteer salesladies in the Hospital Gift Shop.

A special gift of some 50 volumes was presented by the Women's City Club to the new circulating library. Miss Marguerite Griffin, club president and member of the Hospital Women's Board, presented the books on behalf of her organization.

Lucretia Lincoln to Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Francis French Lincoln of Washington and Mount C rmel, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucretia Holt, to Richard Whitney Sterling, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sterling of Los Angeles, Calif.

Miss Lincoln, whose father is head of the trade division of the ECA mission in Athens, Greece, is a student at Bard College, Annandale-on-the-Hudson, N. Y. She attended Germantown Friends School, Philadelphia, Pa., and Sidwell Friends School in this city. Shortly after Christmas she and her mother will join Mr. Lincoln in Athens.

Mr. Sterling is Vice Cousnel at Frankfurt, Germany. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Yale.

MISS FREDERICA STERLING

To Bow on New Year's Day

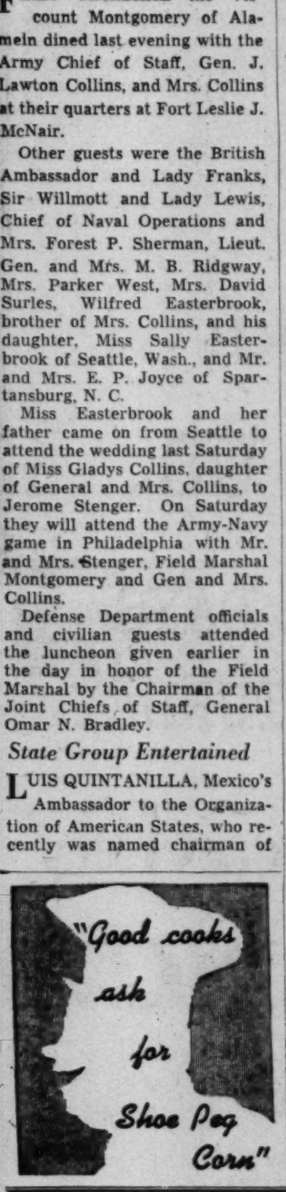
NEWEST addition to the ranks of this season's debutantes is Miss Frederica Sterling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sterling. Miss Sterling will be introduced to her parents' friends at a reception from 5:30 to 8 p. m. on New Year's Day at the Sterling home in Georgetown. A small group of the debutante's close friends will also be guests.

Between Christmas and Easter a half dozen parties in Miss Sterling's honor have been planned by her parents' friends. Percy Blair will give a dinner for her at Anderson House the first week in January. Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed will entertain and others who will fete the debutante are Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis and Mrs. John W. Gross of Bethlehem, Pa., who will give a party at the 1925 F Street Club, her former home.

In August when things are in full swing at Newport, where the Sterlings have a summer home, John and David Sterling will give a dance for their sister. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bruere will be hosts at a dinner giere will be hosts at a dinner during the Newport season.

Earlier in the summer Mr. and Mrs. Sterling will entertain at a dance in Washington for their daughter when guests will be strictly from the younger set. It will be held in June when Miss Sterling returns from college.

Member of one of Washington's oldest families, the debutante is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. John R. Williams and a niece of the late Mrs. Joseph Leiter.



This delightful little tree, made from shining metal, is a unique table decoration or for the mantel or whatever use you can think of, a beautiful and different present. Holds standard birthday candles.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Doing Well in Business at 30, After 10 Years' Progress, Woman Is Never Afraid of New Jobs, But in Romance She Is Terrified at Every Step

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Now at 30 I am earning a good salary, after changing jobs three times in 10 years to work my way up. Never did I feel I couldn't do the job, nor was I afraid of making mistakes to start, for no one is infallible; and if there is a mistake, the thing to do is correct it as well as possible.

In business I never fret or worry, I like the life, have been on the present job three years and get on well with others. There is a good atmosphere, and although at times we disagree and tempers flare, when that passes we are all good friends again.

However, in the department of romance I am afraid to put the next foot forward, as if I were walking through a field of unexploded bombs. I have a boy friend, an ordinary person like myself, although once I imagined him to be a Prince Charming, and we are trying to make a new start together. Two years ago we had an affair and he left me, as men usually do, I suppose, and I was very unhappy.

How Hold Man Who Left Once?

ANYWAY, now he's back. He said he didn't realize he loved me before, because I was always there. But when I wasn't there and he knew I wouldn't be there again, he realized that he did love me and wanted to try again. So now we are trying again, without an affair, and we do all right and he seems to like it; also my friends think he is awfully nice. But I suffer from anxiety.

For instance, at the office if I ask one of the men for something and he shoos me off, I think "He's in a bad mood today. I'll ask again tomorrow." But if the same thing should happen with Harry I'd be lost, for I'd feel sure he just didn't love me. There's the difference.

Harry is older than I, and I would like to get along with him because he is here; but I want most of all to know how to get along with men in a romantic as well as a business way. In business I am very friendly, one could almost say romantic; and maybe I reverse the process and become businesslike in romance. Evidently I do something wrong, and I don't know how to be mysterious. Please advise me. C. B.

Meaning of Her Romantic Manner

DEAR C. B.: Speaking of your almost romantic behavior in business, I suppose you mean taking special notice of men associates and using a coquettish manner and feeling flirtatious (that is, sex conscious) when working directly with them.

That pitch of interest, beamed at men in those circumstances, might seem on the surface to be a harmless display of cordial approval or sentimental respect, such as a great many women wage-earners offer their male confreres, especially those in directive positions.

In general it is a conscious mannerism, discreetly exercised by the ladies to facilitate pleasant working relations in a man's world; but sometimes it is a quite spontaneous, or even a compulsive performance;—that is, an involuntary expression of deference and desire to please, and then it has a different meaning, as follows:

Ought to Modify Dependency Bias

I SHOULD say you typify the exceptional case, the woman in business who seems casually competent and self-reliant, but whose romantic attitude towards men co-workers, or indeed the men she meets anywhere, signifies to the discerning eye that she is questing for help with a hidden difficulty that even she doesn't recognize, namely, an unconscious pattern of extreme dependency which she hopes to solve Cinderella fashion.

The nature of your problem stimulates profound craving for a magic solution provided by a powerful protector, which accounts for your hopeful fantasy, some time ago, that Harry was a Prince Charming. It also activates your current compromise struggle to keep him in the picture as a prop of sorts, now that he's back after blasting your illusions. Better a straw man to appease your anxiety, than none at all, is the philosophy of your striving.

In business your opportunities are limited for taxing men with your dependency characteristics, hence unbearable friction doesn't develop to damage friendship, as happened in your alliance with Harry. However, even in business you have repetitious quarrels, and it seems you habitually ask favors of men co-workers, but you don't mind too much if they shoo you away, because theoretically they owe you nothing, whereas in case of "love" your unconscious demands for assurance of devotion are voracious, insatiable and intolerably "trying" to a man. So correct this drift to ease the rub. M. H.

Cooking Cues . . .

Let tea steep for five minutes before serving, and always make sure you pour the boiling water over the tea. One teaspoonful of tea for each cup served is a good rule.

Top Recker
Interior Furnishings
Fabrics Accessories

Start your Christmas shopping trip at Top Recker's—you'll find a fascinating collection of gifts for the house. There are "big" presents and little ones, but they have all been chosen with taste. For example:

A FAMED PRINT of a charming Parisian street scene in delicate water colors at $5.75, or a handsome reproduction of Rousseau's "Bords de L'Oise" framed in greyed oak, which might become the starting point of a young couple's decorating scheme. An investment in lasting satisfaction for $35.00.

VASES are a delightful addition to a room whether or not they hold flowers—and no flower-lover ever has enough! There are small, fat ruby glass ones at 50c, brightly colored pottery vases and pitchers from $1.00 to $6.00, and handsome beauties in Finnish glass at $5.00 and $7.50. Another idea for flower-lovers—start some bulbs in a copper basket—a small oval one is just $1.00.

A LAMP is a gift of warmth and color and beauty. Choose from Borghese's lovely classic shapes—for instance, a perfectly proportioned urn in dull antique silver at $27.50. Traditional homes welcome tole lamps. They are authentic reproductions in soft, antiqued colors on metal. For a bedroom, consider a candlestick lamp in ivory at $9.50, and there are larger ones for desk and table ranging from $12.50 to $35.00.

SPEAKING OF TABLES—what could be a better present for a new house? For a contemporary room Dunbar's simple, beautifully made two-level end table in natural avodire at $49.00, or Knoll's folding coffee table—round maple top, ebony finished legs—at $30.00.

These are just a few of the Christmas ideas you'll discover at Top Recker's—and you'll enjoy a small, comparatively peaceful shop at this season!

All But the Indians

Same Old Story Today As of Yore: Despite Ye Columnists, U. S. Thankful

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THANKSGIVING, thought up over a hundred and fifty years before the 4th of July, is our oldest national festival, and, curiously, no matter how you mix them, Americans have changed only superficially since 1621.

There were only 55 brand new Americans celebrating the first Thanksgiving in Plymouth Colony ten months after the Mayflower's "hundred souls and more" had stepped determinedly ashore. Forty-six had died from disease and the rigors of the first, harsh New England winter.

Yet the minute those Pilgrim Fathers salted away a few bushels of corn, a mess of turkeys and a slab or two of venison—what did they do? They launched the first Marshall Plan by asking in the Massasoit Indians, feeding them heartily and what's more, sharing their diminishing supply of Holland Gin with the underprivileged red brethren!

Even in those days reporters were active and as much a social hazard as today. Edward Winslow, a direct though necessarily distant progenitor of this department, covered the occasion in fine columnar style. Mr. W., later Governor, wrote home to England prophetically:

Entertained and Feasted

"OUR HARVEST being gotten in, our Governor (William Bradford) sent four men on fowling: so that we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. They four in one day killed almost as much fowl as served the company almost a week. At which time, amongst other recreations, we exercised our arms, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and among the rest their greatest King Massasoyt, with some 90 men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five deer which they brought to the plantation and bestowed on our Governor and upon the Captain (Myles Standish) and others. And although it be not always so plentiful as it was at this time with us, yet by the goodness of God; we are so far from want that we often wish you partakers of our plenty."

One hundred and fifty Thanksgivings ago, in 1800, Americans were in the same groove: shooting, fighting, preoccupied with food and up to their ears in politics. All without Indians, though.

Covers the Scene Cosily

THE WASHINGTON FEDERALIST covers the 1800 Capital scene expertly, in the cosy, intimate journalistic style still in vogue today. The Secretary of the Navy was having a busy time with a smallish squabble on hand. He was doing better than the Army though, which was inserting advertisements for deserters.

The Army was offering $10 reward for the return to George Town barracks of Private Benjamin Chandler who "deserted in full artillery uniform."

The United States Treasury was asked to renew the certificates of certain 6 per cent interest bearing stock "lost by the capture of the Swallow Packet by Capt. Kidd, on her passage from Falmouth to New York." Kidd had long since been hanged for his depredations.

Slim Pickings for Some

THE social columnist had slim pickings. The only item ignored the ladies and read "The Gentlemen of George-Town are requested to meet at Mr. McLaughlin's Tavern Friday evening next at half past five, for the purpose of adopting Rules & Regulations for Assemblies of the Season."

Cheer on Hand as Usual

JOHN BANKS, in his shop on George-Town's High Street was selling a "large and general assortment of fresh groceries on moderate terms for cash." He also pepped up Thanksgiving cheer by advertising nine kinds of liquors including "Anniseed, cinnamon and peppermint cordials" and some extra special "Genuine London Particular Bill Madeira Wine from the House of Gordon & Murdock of Madeira."

The President of George-Town College offered a reward of four dollars for the return of a "Dark Brown Steer with two ears cropped and two slits in the right ear" which had strayed away. And the housing situation then, as now, was tight. A member of Congress advertised "Two furnished rooms wanted for the accomodation of a gentleman with a small family during the session of Congress. Enquiry to be made of the Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives."

Down in Richmond, two plantation owners jointly offered one hundred dollars for the apprehension of a male and female slave who had eloped some months earlier. While the Globe Tavern in Alexandria proclaimed a gala opening, offering "a flock of excellent liquors, attentive and obliging waiters, which with the owners personal exertions to please they flatter themselves will procure a portion of public patronage which has ever been bestowed on the deserving of this town."

Today, in spite of unification, investigations, kidnaping in China, Hungary, slave labor, columnists, hungry people all over the globe, we've the same things to be thankful for as the Pilgrim Fathers, the citizens of our new Republic —freedom, food to give away and the happy fact of being an American.

Senator Hawkes Stops Off

Senator and Mrs. Albert W. Hawkes of New Jersey and Senator Hawkes' sister, Mrs. F. Carnahan of Wilmette, Ill., spent several days here with Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel on their way from Montclair to Florida for a holiday. Mrs. Daniel entertained at dinner Saturday evening for her guests.

Ask Anne

Using the names Mary and John Doe, please indicate the proper way to sign Christmas cards to the following: (a) close friends and relatives; (b) office associates or business acquaintances of the husband; (c) casual friends, i. e., not well known.
M. J. S.

Cards to close friends and relatives would be signed John and Mary or Mary and John, depending upon who is doing the signing. That is, if John is writing the names he would courteously place Mary's name before his and vice versa.

Signing cards to office associates would be the same as above with the last name added, John and Mary Doe or Mary and John Doe. Of, if the business friend is known only to John, he might sign the card with just his own name. This would be particularly true if the card is being addressed just to the business friend whose wife is not included in the address.

When the names are written by hand, you would sign the same for casual friends as for business associates.

Attention Mrs. S. W. M. of Arlington, Mrs. F. G. D. and Mrs. M. S. of Washington who have inquired about preparing wall board or otherwise making an inexpensive blackboard.

I'm sorry I know of no satisfactory way to paint or treat wallboard to make a blackboard. However, there is on the market a blackboard which is less expensive than slate and has the added advantage of being crack resistant. It is made of pressed wood which has had carborundum forced into the surface at extreme pressure, to give a hard, slate-like surface. This type of blackboard can be purchased in sizes from 18 by 24 inches to 4 by 12 feet. The 18 by 24-inch size sells at $3.50; a 3-by-4-foot size at $9.45. For further information I suggest you call one firm which sells them at Metropolitan 4661.

Please let me know where I may secure a copy of the coat of arms bearing my family name?
M. W. C.

If there is a coat of arms for your family it will be filed in the genealogy section at the Library of Congress. I suggest you go to that department, which is located on the fifth floor of the Library Annex. An attendant there will help you make the search.

Would you please tell me if there is a place where an elderly man who has to spend most of his time in the house can get some kind of work he could do at home. He can't type and his handwriting is not very distinct, but otherwise he is very handy.
A READER.

Any suggestions, readers?

I need help in hanging eight pictures, 14 by 18 inches each, in a group. They are nursery pictures for a little girl's room and four must be hung lengthwise and four widthwise. The room is long but narrow. Perhaps an arrangement over her bed would be best. Any suggestions? C. S. I.

To hang all the pictures in one group will make a large arrangement which should, as you suggest, go over the bed.

One possible arrangement is to place two of the pictures which must be hung lengthwise at either end of the arrangement, with the horizontal pictures between them. This way, on the bottom row you would have one vertical, two horizontal and another vertical picture, with the lower edges of all in a straight line. Above them would be the other four—the horizontal pictures directly above the horizontal ones, the vertical directly above the vertical ones in the bottom row.

The upper line of the four top row pictures could be even or you could drop the two center horizontal pictures so there would be the same space between all the pictures.

Another arrangement would be to place all the horizontal pictures on the bottom row, an inch apart. The vertical pictures would be placed about 3½ inches apart above them. This makes a longer, narrower arrangement than the first one mentioned and may not be as good in your narrow room.

The sure way to decide how to place your picture is to cut small pieces of paper to scale and shift them until you have exactly the arrangement you like.

Will you please publish directions for refinishing an old rocking chair in cherry? (Present finish is very worn and soiled.) How can creaking in the chair be eliminated? M. J. S.

Remove the old finish by using a good commercial paint and varnish remover. Apply according to directions which come with the product you buy.

The creaking should be eliminated at this point by tightening all loose joints. The most satisfactory way to do this is to take the chair apart at the loose joints, remove old glue and reglue. If this doesn't seem practical, sometimes thin strips of steel which can be purchased at dime and hardware stores can be forced into the loose joint on the underside so they do not show. This will often tighten the joint enough to eliminate squeaks.

When the chair is tight at the joints, sand the surface until smooth and wipe away all dust with a cloth dampened in turpentine.

Now you are ready for the finish. If the wood is the color you wish it to be, all that is necessary is to apply four or five coats of orange shellac, one immediately after the other. Thin the shellac with turpentine. Allow to dry for 24 hours and give the piece an application of paste wax.

If the wood needs to be stained, you can prepare cherry stain yourself by using red mahogany stain or mixing dragon red color-in-oil into boiled linseed oil. Cherry is the same color as red mahogany stain but just a little lighter, so when you put it on experiment on the underside until you have just the color you wish.

Already-mixed cherry stain does not seem to be found in all hardware stores, but one store which has it is located on New York ave. and can be reached by calling National 8610.

When stain is dry, finish as suggested above or apply one coat of shellac to seal the stain and finish with two coats of varnish, either the shiny or dull drying.

Polite Is Word For Attorney Of Bridges Now

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP).—Harry Bridges' chief attorney, whose caustic arguments got him a six months jail sentence for contempt of court yesterday, looked and acted like a tamed man today.

The usually militant Vincent Hallinan was polite and deferential when the Bridges' perjury trial resumed. He had objections to make—but he made them quietly and carefully.

The trial of the West Coast longshoreman leader got going again in a calm, judicial atmosphere. There was little reminder of the uproarious session yesterday — a session in which Hallinan and United States District Judge George B. Harris clashed with a bitterness rare in a Federal courtroom. Judge Harris granted a stay of the sentence to permit Hallinan to continue to represent Bridges in the trial.

Judge Harris at one point today agreed with the defense attorney that Chief Prosecutor F. Joseph Donahue had not laid the proper foundation for questioning.

This came on testimony by a Government witness, former longshoreman John R. Schomaker, on his first meeting with Bridges. He said he went to Bridges' home in 1933 accompanied by Herman Mann, a fellow stevedore and fellow Communist.

The Government charges that Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, lied in telling a Naturalization examiner in 1945 that he was not a Communist. Two union aides, J. R. Robertson and Henry Schmidt, are charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Donahue asked Schomaker to relate the conversation at his meeting in Bridges' home, but Hallinan objected. He said the court should not allow any testimony concerning possible membership in the Communist Party by Bridges prior to June, 1945. This is the first date in the present indictment.

D. C. Man Helping Prosecute Bridges

F. Joseph (Jiggs) Donohue of the Washington law firm of Donohue, Kaufmann & Kronheim, is one of the Government attorneys prosecuting the Harry Bridges case in San Francisco.

Donohue was first named a special assistant to the Attorney General in June, 1938, the Justice Department said yesterday, but the Bridges case is the only one on which he has worked. He is paid on a per diem basis while working for the Government.

Pilot Who Spanked Wife Wins Suit

Miami, Fla., Nov. 23 (AP)—George Cauthen, the wife-spanking pilot, won an annulment today of his Colombian marriage to pretty Barbara Jean Cauthen on the grounds the marriage never was consummated.

Circuit Judge William A. Herin, in granting the handsome 29-year-old airline pilot freedom from his publicity-minded wife, also gave the 19-year-old beauty queen her maiden name of Barbara Jean Floyd.

Special Master Walter C. Kovner concluded the nuptials of Cauthen and the "Miss New Orleans of 1948" never had been consummated; that Barbara Jean never intended that it should; that the wedding was a publicity stunt—on Barbara Jean's part.

It all started when Barbara Jean became financially stranded in Colombia while on a goodwill tour to promote a bathing beauty contest in New Orleans.

George said he married for love, but Barbara Jean said she married to get a ticket home.

Cauthen said after their marriage on February 4, 1948, they lived in a Bogota, Colombia hotel for three weeks.

But they lived in adjoining rooms, Cauthen testified, and the marriage never was consummated.

He said his wife told him she was fatigued and wished to live alone until she recovered. Later, she told him the marriage wasn't valid and all a publicity stunt.

Col. Miller's Estate Tops $125,000

Colonel Miller's will, filed for executive director of the National Labor Board who died November 9, left an estate in excess of $125,000, it was learned yesterday.

Col. Miller's will, filed for probate in Montgomery County Orphan's Court, listed personal property of more than $100,000 and real estate in county valued at $25,000. Other properties in Virginia and Kentucky were listed without valuation.

His personal effects and Government bonds, as well as the real estate holdings, were willed to his widow, Mrs. Florence G. Miller, of 14 Oxford st., Chevy Chase, and a sum of not more than $10,000 was bequeathed to unnamed charities.

The residue of the estate was placed in trust with his wife and the National Metropolitan Bank for his children, Jesse I. Miller, jr., of the Oxford st. address, and Mrs. Jane Miller Ourisman, of 3000 39th st. nw.

Colonel Miller, a veteran of both World Wars, served with the National Labor Board, predecessor of the National Labor Relations Board, in 1933 and 1934 under the National Recovery Administration.

Maiden Ladies Retreat Site Is Approved

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday paved the way for construction of a $250,000 "Retreat for Friendless Maiden Ladies" at Military rd. and 27th st. nw.

Permission, conditioned on approval of final plans by the board, was granted after an all-day hearing at which the board granted 25 requests for variances from the zoning map and denied five.

The home, which will house about 25 women over 60, will be built with funds left in 1927 by Miss Anna R. Shoemaker. It has been held up by legal wrangling over the will and selection of a suitable site.

The board denied a similar request two months ago on the ground it did not have jurisdiction. The Zoning Commission later cleared away this obstacle by rezoning the property—over the protest of nearby residents.

In the most controversial case of the day, Lawrence I Peak was denied permission to use four alley garages behind 3316 P st. nw. for general storage—or for any of the 12 other uses he suggested.

The request was vigorously opposed by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown, the Georgetown Citizens Association, Mrs. Jacob L. Devers and other property owners in the vicinity. They claimed any commercial use would hurt property values and be "contrary to the trend of improvement" in the neighborhood.

Peak, denied a similar request last year, said the garages are too small for automobiles. Since he has to pay taxes on them, he said, he feels he is entitled to put them to some profitable use.

Marjorie Webster Junior College was granted permission until June 1 to use residences at 1601, 1623 and 1631 Jonquil st. nw. as dormitories, pending completion of new buildings on the campus.

The following also were denied:

Myrtleo Bell, for conversion of basement into apartment at 1502 to 1506 Meridian pd. nw.; Roosevelt Realty Corp. for beauty parlor at Hotel Twenty-Four Hundred, for Hotel 2400, „MRMFWYPSHS 2400 16th st. nw.; Katherine C. Snyder, for erection of two-story office building at 1126 16th st. nw.; Dorothy T. Wilson, for temporary parking lot at 1709 to 1711 Newton st. ne.

U. S. Files Tax Liens Here

Three income tax liens with assessments exceeding $2000 were filed in District Court yesterday by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Largest was a $5250 assessment for 1945 income against Nicholas J. Gaston, a general broker, with offices in the Woodward Building, 15th and H sts. nw.

Gaston contends the sum was for office expenses. He said he has made a $1500 payment and intends to pay the remainder next month.

A $3756 assessment against the New Colonial Hotel, 1156 15th st. nw., was filed for 1946 income. The hotel's management said it was against previous owners for travel expenses and entertainment, and had been paid.

Also filed was an assessment for $3015 on 1948 income against Dr. Frank H. and E. S. Trigg, 2 Q st. ne.

Let Us Be Thankful

Let us pursue our special task . . . And go our separate way . . . But let us all give gratitude . . . On this Thanksgiving Day . . . Our heartfelt gratitude to God . . . For blessings small and great . . . Including warmth and comfort and . . . The food upon our plate . . . For life and health and knowledge and . . . Our family and friends . . . And for the chance to right our wrongs . . . And try to make amends . . . Let us be thankful for the sun . . . And every rainbow bright . . . The fertile field, the factory . . . And quiet in the night . . . And let it be remembered now . . . That God is always here . . . And we should thank Him every day . . . And not just once a year.

"Positively delicious dear. I'll bet it's even better with the feathers off!"

Free Turkey Dinners Set Up for Students

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 23 (AP).—Paul Brown, owner of a restaurant which caters to University of Illinois students, said today he'll lay 400 free turkey dinners on the line Thursday, "no strings attached."

Brown said he wants students to eat the free dinners, especially those who can't get home for Thanksgiving.

"I know how miserable it is to be away from home on a holiday, and maybe this will ease that feeling," he said.

The Family Scrapbook

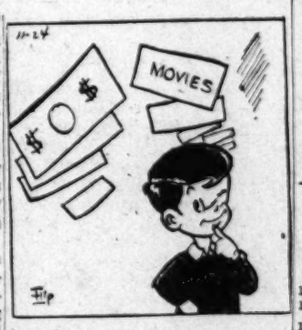
By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Bribes and Rewards

"You'll get a dollar for every 'A' on your report." "If you don't smoke until you are 21, I'll put $50 in your bank account." "If you're a good girl all week, you may go to the movies on Saturday."

How frequently are promises of this sort heard in our homes! Eager to have our children do the things we feel they should, we often try to get desirable behavior through bribes and rewards.

Direct and workable as such an approach may seem, there is considerable question as to its long-term worth. Instead of developing satisfaction in doing good school work, maintaining health or cooperating with the rest of the family, the child who becomes accustomed to being rewarded for good behavior is interested primarily in the reward. If it means a great deal to him, he will be tempted to conceal any "slips" that would make him lose it. Not infrequently, too, his ideas change and parents have to "up" the reward in order to get results.



The easy way of bribes and rewards usually doesn't work in getting desired behavior. Helping youngsters find satisfaction through parent approval and gratification from a job well done is better policy.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by Bill Gold

Here's a Transcription Without a Message From the Sponsor

"Every time I call Sterling 2525 (formerly District 2525) for the correct time, the voice that answers seems to be the same," reports George Speck of 918 Beverley dr., Alexandria, Va. "Does the same girl work 24 hours a day?"

Nope—it's a recording, controlled by an electric clock. In all probability the same voice recorded all the various times of the day, and therefore, until the record wears out, "the same girl" will always answer your call.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Assorted kittens, all husky." (Axminster 7431.)

"Black and white untrained hunting dog and her nine puppies." (Alexandria 5440.)

"Small, beautiful terrier, 18 months old; we're moving into town." (Elmwood 209.)

TALKING TURKEY

I heard two turkeys talking
And this is what one said:
"I'll be all right Thanksgiving
If I don't lose my head."

David Kandel

NO STORY

The Post Office Department has double-crossed me.

About 10 days ago, a fellow called me from New York. As we concluded our conversation, he said: "I'll send you the details, air mail special delivery."

I got his letter two days later. It had taken 20 hours to move from New York to Washington (elapsed time between postmarks on the front and back of the envelope) and several hours more to be delivered to me.

That gave me an idea. I had a friend of mine in New York send me air mail and regular mail letters every day for a week, so that I could check up. At the end of the week, I was going to do a piece stating that trains deliver mail faster than planes between New York and Washington.

But the Post Office Department tripped me up. It just isn't so.

The air mail letters arrived either before or simultaneously with regular mail letters posted at the same time.

ADD SIMILES

E. H. Walker of the Smithsonian Institution tells friends his car has "more rattles than a rich man's baby."

PUN FUN ON A SERIOUS SUBJECT

Recalling the old wisecrack that "Unification works everyplace except in the Pentagon," Del L. Dyreson of 2719 Ontario rd. nw. observes:

"Possibly emphasis on a repent-agon spirit is in order, lest we awaken some day to find our Penta-gons."

YOU FIGURE IT OUT

We certainly meet some interesting people in this business.

Like the fellow who called me a dozen times, but never when I was in. He wouldn't leave his name or number, so I could never call him back.

This went on for a period of weeks. All he wanted was an appointment to see me. But he wouldn't make the arrangements with anybody but me.

Finally he gave his name, and said he'd call again at 6 p. m., when they told him I'd be available. I came in at 5, and worked until past midnight, but there was no call. So I forgot about him.

Yesterday he called from a pay phone in Wilmington, Del. "At last I've gotten hold of you," he said. "When can I see you?"

"You're in Wilmington and I'm in Washington," I reminded him.

"I can get on a train and be there in 3 hours," he urged. "I've got to see you about something personal."

"Okay. I'll be here. I'll see you about 5."

The appointed time came and went; no sign of a visitor.

"I'm going down to the sports department for a minute," I told my cellmate at 6 o'clock. "If my visitor shows up, tell him I'll be right back."

When I returned 5 minutes later, I was greeted with: "That fellow walked in just as you walked out. He said he'd wait out in the hall."

But the corridor was empty, and to this moment I still don't know what—if anything—was on the man's mind.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Speaking of definitions, W. M. Devine reports that his Webster gives this one for "idiot":

"An ignorant person; originally, a private person, not holding public office."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Mel Blume of 1625 West Virginia ave. ne. observes that while we're being thankful for our Thanksgiving Day feast, we ought to be thankful also for the lowly can-opener, which makes most of the remainder of the year's meals possible.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Cary Harrison, the son of Lilli Palmer and Rex Harrison, is enrolled at a N. Y. school where French is taught to the young pupils. To encourage his son's interest in the language, Harrison promised to reward Cary. "I'll give you a dime for every French word you learn," he proposed . . . Yesterday the youngster demanded a dime from his father. "I earned it," he reported. "When the teacher offered us milk, I wanted some and I told her 'No, merci,' " and drank it. So you owe me a dime" . . . Harrison studied the boy, weighed the problem and finally decided: "That doesn't call for a dime. I owe you a nickel."

Erich Maria Remarque just returned from Europe with this gruesome postwar story being told in Berlin: Two men who had been comrades in the Nazi SS troops met on a street in Germany. The first was gaunt and ill, but the second was strong and healthy. "You look so prosperous," said the first . . . "I am," beamed the second, "I have a nice, steady income" . . . "But how? From where?" asked the first . . . "From the cellar of my house," explained the robust Storm Trooper. "I've been hiding two anti-Nazis there for six years" . . . But the war's long over," said the first . . . "Of course," shrugged the second, "but I haven't told them."

A psychopathic lady from Harrisburg, Pa., confident that she is the "Mrs. Calabash" to whom Jimmy Durante addresses his broadcasts sign-off, left her home and came to Durante's house. He calmed the lady and managed to get her on a train back to Harrisburg . . . Former Attorney General Francis Biddle declined the President's offer of a diplomatic post in South Africa. "It's unromantic," he said.

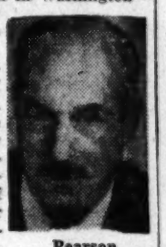
Benton May Come Back Vindicated

By Drew Pearson

It looks as if President Truman would soon have one of his former assistants, whom he didn't particularly like, back in Washington—this time in the Senate. He is William Benton, former Assistant Secretary of State, who will probably be the new Senator from Connecticut after the retirement of GOP Senator Raymond Baldwin on January 1.



Pearson

Gov. Chester Bowles has virtually decided to appoint Benton, a Democrat, to Baldwin's seat.

Benton, who had the difficult job of setting up the State Department's new propaganda office, pioneered the Voice of America radio program. He also went in for an art exhibit, which was sent to various foreign countries, and it was this that got him in the hair of his chief in the White House.

Truman didn't like modernistic art, and didn't hesitate to say so. In fact, he took the trouble to write Benton a confidential letter describing modern art "as merely the vaporings of half-baked lazy people . . . There is no art at all in connection with the modernists, in my opinion," Truman told his subordinate.

Benton's Final Triumph

Benton also had a tough time with certain Congressmen, especially penny-pinching John Taber of New York, who cut the heart out of his appropriations. It is interesting to note, however, that Congress later came round to the realization that Benton's propaganda program was one of the most important things the State Department was doing. In fact, most of the things Benton crusaded for have now received full recognition.

Despite this, General Marshall, on becoming Secretary of State, asked for Benton's resignation, and the tough-talking former advertising executive retired to Connecticut, where he kept busy with the Encyclopedia Britannica, which he owns, and Muzak, the company that pipes music into hotels and restaurants all over the United States.

If Governor Bowles carries through his present intention of appointing his close friend to the Senate, Benton will now vote on the appropriations of State Department officials who once conspired to fire him. However, Benton bears no grudges, and when the Democratic Party was having a tough time raising money in 1948, he came through with a contribution for the President who once eased him out of Washington.

Thanksgiving Idea

The Mormon Church has adopted a Thanksgiving Day idea that larger church groups, or even those affiliated with no church, might want to adopt.

The Mormons are doing without one full meal at this time of the year and donating the amount they would spend for that meal to some one who cannot afford a Thanksgiving dinner. In many cases, they are giving the money to the Community Chest.

Behind this Mormon gesture is not only the idea of helping one's fellow man, but also the idea that the hunger pangs of one who goes without a meal makes him think a little more about the sufferings of others.

Perhaps in Washington, D. C., where the people of the Capital of the wealthiest and most powerful Nation have not always been able to fill their Community Chest quota, it might be a good idea to take a leaf from the Mormons' book. If every one gave up one meal during the week and contributed the equivalent to the Community Chest, the barometer of community generosity would shoot up to near the boiling point.

Wall Street Brushoff

Wall Street bankers are in for a big brushoff when Cameron S. Cobbold, president of the Bank of England, visits the United States early next month for a discussion of world trade and monetary problems.

In the past, Montagu Norman, Lord Cato and other Bank of England tycoons always dealt directly with Wall Street when they had business in the United States. They ignored Washington except for social teas.

However, the British government has instructed Cobbold to give Wall Street bankers the go-by on this trip and do his talking with the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. He will make only a token, courtesy call in New York after his business in Washington is finished.

Federal Reserve insiders report that the British banking official is not coming here for another handout for his government, but to exchange ideas on how to stimulate trade by a freer exchange of currency and of private investment capital between the United States and Great Britain.
